Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The American economy is taking its sharpest plunge in years, with some economists predicting a year-long recession and unemployment of 8 per cent.

Adding further gloom to the picture, Saudi Arabian officials indicated they will not stand in the way of a large increase in the official price of crude oil when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets in Geneva next month.

The reports came as Saudi Arabia increased prices by $1.40 U.S. to $17.87 a barrel on its Berri grade of crude oil, a high grade of petroleum that comprises about four per cent of the 8.5 million barrels OPEC's largest member produces daily.

Meanwhile, it was reported that last month the U.S. Index of Leading Economic Indicators had taken its sharpest plunge ever recorded, that new orders to the nation's factories for manufactured goods had dropped by $9.1 billion and that the trade deficit was nearly $2.2 billion, the worst in three months.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that April's slide of 3.3 per cent in the economic indicator index — a major gauge of the economy — was even bigger than the 3 per cent dip recorded in September, 1974, during the last big recession.

The decline in factory orders of 6.1 per cent to $141 billion was the sharpest percentage decline in any one month since 6.6 per cent in December, 1974.

A large part of the decline in factory orders consisted of drops in requests for durable goods such as non-electrical machinery, transportation equipment, primary metals and fabricated metal products.

Some economists believe that if the leading indicator index falls three straight months in a row a recession lies ahead. Others say that this is too simple a rule, especially since the index gyrates wildly and is frequently revised.

Last month, the department reported the index had fallen three months in a row — January, February and March.

But today, the department

UIC curbs delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Restrictions on unemployment insurance benefits scheduled to go into effect Sunday have been postponed pending a review by the Progressive Conservative government.

A spokesman at unemployment insurance headquarters said today that senior officials decided Monday to delay the changes, to give a new minister the opportunity to review them.

Joe Clark is to name his new cabinet Monday, including a person to replace the defeated Liberal Bud Cullen, minister of employment, who piloted the insurance changes through Parliament last winter.

The changes, creating new categories of insurance claimants and increasing the weeks persons have to work before they qualify for benefits, were opposed by Conservatives in Parliament.

Conservatives proposed scrapping the new plan and instituting instead a two-tiered benefit system with lower payments to claimants without dependents.

The Liberals said changes would cut about 214,000 persons from insurance rolls in the first year and save about $440 million.

Officials estimated that the Conservative proposal would reduce benefits to about 1.8 million persons, about 73 per cent of claimants, for a saving of about $850 million.

The new categories of claimants that would have gone into effect Sunday are repeaters, claiming benefits for the second time in a year; new entrants, claiming benefits after a first job; re-entrants, claiming benefits after a job preceded by a long absence from the labor force.

Most people in these groups would have to work longer than the standard 10 to 14 weeks to qualify for benefits.

Conservatives said the plan is excessively complicated, would be unfair to persons in regions with high seasonal unemployment and would penalize women who leave the labor force to raise children.

Liberals rejected the Conservative's two-tiered system on grounds it would discriminate against women put an extra burden on employers to determine which employees have dependents and create complex administrative problems.

The New Democratic Party also opposed the two-tiered plan. But it was officially endorsed by three provincial Conservative governments — Ontario, Newfoundland and New Brunswick.

Food profits up 43%

OTTAWA (CP) — Latest profit figures show that the retail food industry increased its first-quarter profits by 43 per cent compared with the corresponding quarter of 1978. During the same three-month period, the sales increased by a much smaller 19 per cent.

"Profit margins do appear to be up substantially," said Larry Thibault, chief economist for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

"But profits in that business go up and down like a yo-yo," he added. "The food industry has been literally studied to death in the last few years and from all the shelves of studies I've got in my office I haven't seen one that's been able to prove any kind of rip-off profits."

Spokesmen for the food chains say their profit margin on groceries is small.They maintain that the only way they manage to stay in business with their small mark-up on individual items is to sell in huge volume.

"The pressures on Loblaws and Dominion and the others are real and intense," said Thibault. Consumer pressure has been a key factor in innovations such as no-name products and no-frills discount grocery outlets in large cities, he said.

"But I think we've reached the stage where the retail food business is about as efficient and competitive as it can get," he said. "I can think of no dramatic improvement that can be squeezed out of the system."

Blank cheque Loto?

She wrote Loto Canada after the December draw, for which she held a ticket devoid of a number, and was visited by auditor Allan Glennis of Loto Canada's Ottawa office.

She said she declined to give the ticket to Glennis although "he was practically begging me to give it to him."

She withheld on the ticket on the advice of her lawyer and said she believes any unclaimed prize money should be split among the group of 10 people, including herself, who bought the ticket.

Barbara Patterson, public relations officer for the Atlantic office of Loto Canada, said officials wanted the ticket to show the printer the error that had occurred.

She said a sheet on which 18 tickets were printed was placed in a machine backwards, causing the number to be printed on the wrong side.

Loto officials traced down the other ticket holders.

Mrs. Jeffries said she was given another ticket on the draw by Glennis.

Collision with tree kills biker

A 21-year-old motorcyclist was killed today in an early morning mishap in Oak Bay, the second traffic fatality in southern Vancouver Island in 24 hours.

Gordon Bernard Kopplin, 1186 May, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 5:50 a.m.

Oak Bay police said Kopplin was riding his motorcycle in the 1000-block Newport when he ran into a tree after failing to round a curve.

An inquest is expected but no date has been set.

An inquest is also expected in connection with a fatality on Shawnigan Lake Road about 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said William Robert Lyness, 60, of 691 Camellia Place in Saanich, drowned after his car travelling at high speed plunged into the south end of the lake and came to rest in about five metres of water.

There were no skid marks on the road which has given rise to suspicions Lyness, a maintenance man with the defence department, may have suffered a heart attack.

FLQ pair's plea sparks hot courtroom debate

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, the onetime Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists, became the focus of a dramatic legal debate today on the just punishment for the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross in October, 1970.

Arguments on sentence began minutes after the couple pleaded guilty to charges of kidnapping, conspiracy and forcible detention in the 60-day kidnapping that sparked the October Crisis.

But they refused to enter a guilty plea to a fourth charge of extortion against the Quebec government during the crisis. They were nevertheless convicted when Chief Judge Yves Mayrand of sessions court entered a guilty verdict.

Crown prosecutor Jean-Pierre Bonin argued for a tough sentence that would help fight the "international wound" caused by a wave of terrorism in the 1970s.

But he made no specific suggestion on the length of sentence.

In an emotional opening statement, defence lawyer Serge Menard argued for clemency on grounds that the couple had openly renounced terrorism, that they has suffered greatly during eight years of exile and that the Quebec justice system's public image would suffer if a harsh punishment were imposed.

Judge Mayrand based his guilty verdict on the extortion charge — somewhat of a legal oddity in the absence of a full trial — on a series of factual admissions that the couple made.

Menard said his clients were ready to concede they conspired to kidnap Cross, forcibly detained him and were also involved in the Oct. 5, 1970, kidnapping.

But he argued the extortion charge was based on acts they committed during the kidnapping and on a ransom demand that was issued as a negotiating tactic and later dropped.

Mortgage rate jumps linked to PC policy?

TORONTO (CP) — House owners expecting a tax break from the new federal government received bad news Wednesday from some major mortgage lenders.

Two banks and a trust company raised key mortgage rates a quarter point.

Economists had predicted the Progressive Conservative election promise on mortgage interest deduction would raise mortgage rates. The Conservatives have promised a four-year program under which home owners might deduct up to $5,000 a year on their mortgage interest and $1,000 on property tax.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Bank of Montreal and Canada Trustco Mortgage Co. of London, Ont., were the first to announce increases.

Effective immediately, the banks' rates on closed, five-year and three-year National Housing Act-approved mortgages increased to 11 per cent from 10¾ per cent.

The rate on five-year conventional and NHA open mortgages, at 11½ and 11¼ respectively, were not changed.

The trust company raised its rates for one- through five-year mortgages to 11 per cent for NHA mortgages and 11¼ for conventional mortgages.

Kinross Mortgage Corp., a subsidiary of Canadian Imperial, increased its five-year debenture rate by one-quarter to 10 per cent.

Canadian Imperial said the increase "reflects the continuing high cost of funds to the bank."

The mortgage rates had to rise because "money costs have risen to the level that lending rates could not be sustained" at current levels.

Ferries' version 'incorrect'

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

A Victoria woman said today the B.C. Ferries version of an incident involving a leaky propane truck was incorrect and that the vehicle — which could have been exploded by a spark — was carried to Vancouver Island from the mainland.

Ferry spokesman Bill Bouchard said earlier the truck was ordered off the Queen of Esquimalt at Swartz Bay as soon as ferry workers spotted the leak.

According to Bouchard the truck had been ordered off before the vessel sailed.

In fact, the woman said, the truck was carried over from Tswassen to Swartz Bay, leaking the entire time, with passengers evacuated to a top deck.

The woman, who asked not to be identified, said the truck was leaking badly.

"The air on the car deck was saturated with gas. Any spark, if anybody had so much as lit a cigarette down there, the whole ferry would have exploded," she told the Times.

The woman said she was parked near the Sidney Freight Ltd. truck that was apparently carrying a leaky propane tank with its cargo.

The woman said things didn't happen the way ferry officials described it in the earlier news accounts.

"That truck was leaking when it came aboard. I was parked a few cars away and you could hear it hissing. About 15 or 20 minutes out they apparently discovered it and everyone was ordered off the car deck . . . they should have turned back, but we went on."

She praised the way the crew handled the situation, however, saying they were "very cool".

But, she added, "that truck should never have been allowed aboard . . . there should be some way of checking vehicles before they're loaded."

B.C. Ferry officials were unavailable for comment today but it is understood the incident is still under investigation.

A spokesman for Sidney Freight said his company is concerned about the matter and is looking into it.

Under B.C. Ferry regulations, vehicles carrying highly flammable or explosive materials are not allowed aboard passenger ferries but are consigned to special dangerous cargo runs.

Bread, milk subsidies again?

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister-elect Joe Clark indicated in talks with NDP Leader Ed Broadbent Wednesday that he plans taking some action to deal with rising prices this summer, such as restoring the government subsidies for bread and milk.

Broadbent said after the meeting that he had issued one warning to Clark: That any attempt to sell off Petro-Canada could spell the end of his regime.

"Mr. Clark told me he intends to go ahead with his election promise to dismantle Petro-Canada but he didn't elaborate and didn't lay out a timetable," Broadbent told reporters at his first news conference since the May 22 election.

"I made it very clear to Mr. Clark that it is not possible for my party to accept the disintegration of Petro-Canada and we will be voting against it."

Clark later said that he intends to go ahead with the proposal anyhow.

Provincial Treasurer Lou Hyndman said Wednesday in Edmonton that purchase of Petro-Canada shares might be considered a good buy for the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund.

Following another meeting Wednesday, that one with Governor-General Edward Schreyer, Clark said he has not finished drawing up his cabinet. But it would be about the same size as the 30-member Trudeau cabinet — "perhaps a little smaller."

Clark said he and Schreyer had agreed to televise Monday's swearing-in ceremony in an effort to make "institutions of government as public as possible."

Clark's press secretary, Donald Doyle, said he is uncertain whether the opportunity will be used to make a speech.

Little has surfaced yet concerning the makeup of Clark's cabinet; it was revealed however, Wednesday that one person has turned down a post.

Pierre Laurin, who does not hold a Commons seat and was apparently promised elevation to the Senate, said he refused Clark's offer for "very personal reasons."

Laurin is the director of the University of Montreal business school and brother of Quebec Cultural Affairs Minister Camille Laurin.

It was further learned Wednesday that Clark has approached a Toronto job placement firm for advice on how to eliminate the 60,000 federal civil service jobs he has said are not needed.

Steven Shaw of Steven Shaw Associates said a Clark emissary had made inquiries on how to cut the civil service payroll.

Clark had promised during the federal election campaign he would get rid of 60,000 civil service jobs.

Shaw estimated he could find jobs for about five to 10 per cent of those Clark would want fired.

Shaw said civil servants are not the easiest people to find jobs for.

"We could place a Ford (Co. of Canada Ltd.) executive in a week or two. But there's a lot of dead wood in the civil service. They haven't been trained to produce. Private industries won't pay civil service wages."

Joe prefers his Chevy

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark doesn't want the Silver Bullet.

Aides say the Progressive Conservative leader is perfectly happy with the humble four-door Chevy Impala he's been using, and that he has no intention of claiming the five-ton silver-grey Cadillac limousine that has hauled Prime Minister Trudeau around for the last five years.

Security officers presented Trudeau with the $84,000 car — it's telephone-equipped, bears licence number CAN 001 and can withstand the force of a hand grenade — in 1974, and he's been using it around Ottawa ever since.

But while Clark can lay claim to the car, press aide Donald Doyle says he has no plans to use it.

Instead, he would get around in the blue 1979 Chevy, licence number OFJ 087, with the big, blue pillow in the back and a space for a trailer hitch.

Trudeau, like Clark, initially objected to the car — he said he preferred his Mercedes sports car. But security forces convinced him to use it.

Not overstaffed, say police

Victoria Police Union president Bryan Bailey today took issue with Ald. Robin Blencoe over his claim the city has a larger than average police force.

Bailey said that although Blencoe's statistics may be accurate "it's not as cut and dried as he makes it seem."

In a letter to the police board Blencoe said the force is big enough to handle a population of 81,664, based on the provincial average, rather than the city's 1976 census population of 62,551.

But Bailey says that although the city police force is of an adequate size to deal with Victoria's population alone, it is significantly understaffed when the over-all population of Greater Victoria is taken into consideration.

"And we in the police force believe that we police Greater Victoria," he said.

Bailey said the city core is a focal point for the surrounding municipalities and the police force has a lot more people to deal with than just residents.

A lot more people visit the downtown area for work, shopping and entertainment than live here, he pointed out.

Bailey said that based on Victoria's population, there is one police officer for every 440 people, but when the Greater Victoria population is considered the ratio is one to 1,760. The provincial average is one police officer for every 496 people.

In his letter Blencoe said Vancouver has a much more deteriorated city core to deal with and a less rapidly rising crime rate.

Bailey said, however, that comparing Vancouver/Victoria statistics proves that the capital city force is undermanned.

He said Victoria police officers have to deal with a 49 per cent higher crime rate and 55 per cent higher case load than their counterparts in Vancouver.

"If we're going to compare case loads . . . Victoria needs another 79 men," said Bailey.

"One prowler car on an average shift will deal with 32 calls in a night," said Bailey. "It's just go, go, go, all the time."

Blencoe sent his letter to the police board in order to encourage the board to adopt community policing methods for the city.

Blencoe said that community policing, which stresses crime prevention, will help the Victoria police force in dealing with the community.

"New methods of attacking crime have been discussed in Victoria for more than two years," wrote Blencoe, "but only tentative steps have been taken."

Bailey said that although he disputes some of the things put forward in Blencoe's letter, he and the police union are looking forward to investigating new policing methods in the future.

Freighter gets frisked for 'cache of cocaine'

RCMP drug officers using welding torches and crowbars are ripping apart hatches and lockers aboard the 51-metre Samarkanda to determine whether any additional drugs are on board.

The vessel was seized May 22 along with more than 35 tons of marijuana at Sydney Inlet northwest of Tofino.

Insp. Dave Staples, head of the RCMP drug investigations section, said today officers started the search following rumors that as much as 200 pounds of cocaine might have been stashed aboard the freighter when it left Colombia late last month.

"As far as we can tell now the presence of other drugs on board is nothing more than rumors . . . only speculation," he said.

Staples said officers have gone through all of the compartments in the hold of the vessel except one which was to be examined today.

A thorough search of the Whitecap, a 16-metre pleasure cruiser also seized by police in the 35-ton marijuana bust, has already been made but officers came up empty-handed.

So far the only contraband, other than the marijuana, found by police officers was two handguns, a pistol and a revolver, both recovered from the Samarkanda.

No other weapons were seized in the police raid which has resulted in the arrest of 23 men including six Americans, one Costa Rican and 16 Colombians in the Tofino area and another American on Orcas Island by members of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency.

The Tofino group is to appear in provincial court in Victoria Friday for election of trial method and bail hearings.

Widely differing weather was noted over the district overnight. Clear skies over southern regions gave way to cloud in the central and northern interior and to periods of rain or drizzle on the north coast. Pulses of moisture from an offshore frontal system will move through central and eastern regions while a high pressure area off Vancouver Island maintains sunny and dry conditions over the southern interior and most of the south coast.

N-Plant technicians working in dark after mishap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The four men on duty when the worst nuclear accident in the United States began have painted a picture of working largely in the dark after the accident because instruments weren't telling them what was happening or how to fix it.

The shift operators of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant told a presidential commission Wednesday that more than 200 alarms went off in the first seconds of the accident.

"I'd like to have thrown away the alarms (because) they weren't giving us any useful information," said operator Craig Faust.

The men said that if they had been given proper information by the banks of instruments in the $1-billion plant's control centre early March 28, they might have averted heavy damage to the reactor core.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigators have concluded that most of the core damage occurred during a 50-minute period beginning about one hour and 40 minutes after the accident began.

The four employees were among a dozen utility representatives to appear before the commission on the first of three days of hearings.

The commission, which must report on the accident and make recommendations to President Jimmy Carter by Oct. 25, was scheduled to continue its hearings today with the appearance of more utility officials and technicians from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

At Wednesday's hearing, commission chairman John Kemeny, a computer specialist and president of Dartmouth College, told executives of the utility which operates the plant that the Three Mile Island control-room instruments "seem to be about 20 years out of date."

Executives of Metropolitan Edison, which operates the plant, and its parent company, General Public Utilities Corp., disputed the contention. But Kemeny, who toured the plant May 17 along with other commissioners, persisted, saying that even "a fairly simple university computer centre that costs a great deal less than a billion dollars" has more sophisticated electronic gear.

Investigators of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have said repeatedly since the accident near Harrisburg, Pa., that a combination of human and mechanical errors, including inadequate instruments, turned the accident into a near catastrophe from a minor interruption in cooling water.

At Wednesday's hearings, utility executives again outlined some of the major events that contributed to the accident's severity: a key set of valves in an auxiliary cooling system were closed mysteriously; misleading readings on a pressure-level guage caused one operator to turn the emergency cooling system off; and a pressurizer-relief valve was open for two hours and 20 minutes — venting coolant from the closed pipes — when everyone thought the valve was closed.

High-fly promoters grounded by slogan

Sutherland . . . just wants medal back

For a while they considered melting it down and casting it as memorial medals, but in the end the owners of Elvis Presley's Convair 880 jet decided they didn't have the business courage to do that. The medals were to have been marketed under the slogan, "Buy a piece of Elvis's tail." So now they are trying to sell the plane whole for $3.8 million. Sales managers Bob Frederick and Ray Henderson of a firm known as Omni International Jet Trading say at that price Elvis's jet will sell for only $1.6 million or so more than its base value.

British rock music star Elton John surprised his Moscow fans by playing Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 Wednesday night to cap an eight-concert Soviet tour he called an overwhelming success. The audience rose to its feet, screamed and clapped through most of the 32-year-old singer's final performance, which tour members said reached the fevered pitch of the opening show in Leningrad. "It was overwhelming," John told reporters after the sold-out concert at Moscow's 3,000-seat Rossiya Hotel hall. "This is the most memorable moment of my whole career."

Plans for Mary Pickford's funeral today were kept secret so the service and burial would not be mobbed by the admirers she once drew everywhere she appeared. "It will be a very intimate family affair at Forest Lawn," said Matty Kemp, a business associate of the late actress and her husband, Buddy Rogers. "We're fearful if anything is written in the papers the services would be mobbed by thousands and thousands of admirers. It was Mary's wish that she did not want a big memorial service or any fanfare. She wanted to be quietly laid to rest."

Hollywood correspondent Rona Barrett reported today that Johnny Carson may be able to leave the NBC before his contract expires in 1981 because the contract may not be as binding as NBC believes. Reporting on ABC-TV's Good Morning America show, Ms. Barrett said Carson's representatives have indicated that NBC's intention to keep him on the air until 1981 is "premature at best." She said negotiations between NBC and Carson "have not progressed" since the blow-up between the host of the "Tonight" show and NBC executives several weeks ago.

And, finally, losing $18,000 in a robbery is unpleasant, but for actor Donald Sutherland, the insult to his injury was the loss of his Order of Canada medal. Sutherland, who arrived in Toronto Monday to work on a film, returned to his hotel room Tuesday night to find a briefcase containing more than $3,000 in cash and $15,000 in jewelry and travelers' checks missing. What made it worse, Sutherland said Wednesday, was waking up to find his tale of woe in the newspapers. "All I want is my keys and my Order of Canada Medal," the weary-voiced actor said. "For God's sake," he added quickly. "Don't print that, or they will throw it into the river. Sometimes, if you word it carefully, they send back your wallet and keys." The Canadian-born Sutherland ironically is in Canada to star in a film called Nothing Personal.

Bloch's remains returned

ENTEBBE (UPI) — The new Ugandan government today solemnly handed over a blue-draped coffin containing the remains of Dora Bloch, the Israeli grandmother slain on orders of Idi Amin after the 1976 Entebbe raid.

Mrs. Bloch was killed on Amin's orders shortly after Israeli commandos stormed Entebbe Airport in July 1976.

Mrs. Bloch's son, Bertram, received the coffin officially from Uganda's deputy minister of the interior, Andrew Kayiira, and said he would bury her in a special family plot in Jerusalem.

Killer floods rip Britain

LONDON (AP) — Torrential rains swept a huge area of southern England on Wednesday, leaving a trail of disastrous flooding and death.

The storms broke in the West Country, then fanned out into the Thames valley, the Midlands and parts of northern England.

Three persons were killed and four were critically injured in a crash of four cars and a truck during a thunderstorm on the highway linking London and the West Country. Floodwaters up to 1.5 metres deep inundated homes, roads and rail lines, disrupting rail service in the same area.

In Dorset, the Char River burst its banks sending thousands of tons of water on a tidal wave of destruction through the Dolphins trailer park near Charmouth.

A trailer with a family inside was swept into the river and zig-zagged in the raging river for 200 metres until it crashed into an oak tree.

The trailer's owner, William Chapman, 31, of Dorking, south of London, managed to gets his wife and three children, along with a neighbor's child, into the branches of the tree as the waters swirled below them. They were rescued two hours later.

An end to universality

The Liberal government which Canadians recently threw out of office was identified with a number of expensive social welfare policies designed in the 1960s on an expansionist tide of prosperity and rapidly rising government revenues. Various programs were established and financed jointly with the provinces. After Ottawa established the universal old age pension, various specialized supplements and extras were devised to attack special pockets of poverty among the Canadian population. Existing schemes like unemployment insurance were vastly expanded in scope and coverage.

Between 1965 and 1975, expenditures on social welfare programs in this country increased fivefold, while the gross national product tripled and total government spending was up 400 per cent.

One would think that this massive concentration of money and energy on social problems would have had a significant impact upon the unequal distribution of wealth in this country. In fact, according to the Canadian Council on Social Development, there has been little change in the status quo.

"Poverty in Canada remains a pervasive and tragic problem," according to recent publications by the council, an independent research body which draws on governments, business, individuals and other institutions for its funding.

Defining the border line as $10,605 for a family of four, the council calculated that at mid-1978 some 20 per cent of Canadians were living in poverty. Given that careful budgeting can make that much money go farther in one family than another careless with money or one plagued with alcohol-associated problems, for instance, this rough statistical generalization still means several million Canadians are dirt poor.

At its last detailed exploration of poverty in Canada three years ago, the council found that 4.4 million people living below this statistical mark. Continuing inflation and unemployment obviously have not improved things for anyone numbered among the ranks of the poor.

The young, the old and families headed by women are the worst-off. In 1976, nearly a third of families headed by those under 25 and two in five families headed by those over 65 had incomes less than $5,000 a year.

Where a woman was head of the family, 80 per cent had incomes less than $11,000. The equivalent figure for households headed by males was only 29 per cent. The average yearly income of families headed by women was only $7,502, for men, $18,273.

The statistics demonstrate that two decades of universal family allowances, medicare, social assistance, mincome-style programs and extensive unemployment insurance have not even begun to eradicate poverty. What can be done about it?

A week before the federal election, the Council on Social Development published a report recommending a new strategy. Obviously, there is no money for massive new social programs — a guaranteed annual income or negative income tax, for example. The political climate is not receptive to such ideas. Everywhere, politicians have been elected on promises of budget restraints and cutting costs and eliminating so-called frills.

The council recognizes this limitation. It proposes instead an end to "universal accessibility" in social programs, and the reallocation of the savings to specific target groups among the poor.

It estimates that by taxing back family allowances and old age pensions from families with incomes above $21,000 about $750 million could be pooled and applied specifically to an improved child credit tax plan or an income supplement for the working poor.

Universality in social programs is a fine, egalitarian concept which most people prefer to the indignities of means tests which accompanied the rudimentary social welfare schemes of the depression. But it too seems to have outlived its usefulness. Instead of a scattergun approach, a more selective and carefully tailored range of social programs may finally do something about poverty in Canada.

Death penalty discrimination in U.S.

WASHINGTON — The execution of John Spenkelink in a Florida electric chair last week has re-opened a legal and moral debate over capital punishment that many other western nations, including Canada, have virtually put to rest.

Spenkelink, 30, was the first American to be executed against his will since 1967, when abolitionists mounted an intensive campaign saying the death penalty was unconstitutional.

The failure of Spenkelink's final appeals, together with the chilling public reports of his death by electrocution, was a psychological blow to 500 other convicts now on death row in the U.S.

Meanwhile, the U.S. supreme court, final arbiter of a state's right to put a criminal to death, has yet to speak with a clear and unequivocal voice on the morality and even the constitutionality of capital punishment.

Is law discriminatory?

Nor have the nation's judges and lawmakers been able to satisfactorily answer charges that the death penalty is used in a discriminatory fashion.

Of the world's major powers, only the U.S., the Soviet Union, South Africa and possibly China still exact the death penalty for strictly criminal offenses.

Opinion polls show that nearly two-thirds of Americans favor state executions, even though the deterrent argument carries little weight anymore. This feeling, reflected among legislators, is ascribed to a growing concern over urban crime and the perceived failure of social programs.

But interestingly, Americans tend to be far less hard-nosed on the issue on a case-by-case basis. A recent survey by a Yale psychologist, for example, showed that adults who believe in capital punishment as a rule back off when confronted by real-life criminal cases.

Told about actual homicides, including the shooting of a policeman and the beating death of a woman, only 15 per cent of a random group said they would favor the death penalty in these particular cases.

Since the 1960s, most western countries have abolished capital punishment for purely criminal acts (e.g. excluding treason and other crimes against the state). West Germany, Austria, Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, Italy, Spain and even a number of Latin American countries have cashiered the hangman and the firing squads and dismantled the electric chairs in the name of social justice.

Canada, which has not had an execution since 1962, struck the death penalty from the criminal code in 1976, substituting for it a minimum 25-year prison term for acts of premeditated murder and treason.

But the U.S., despite periods of appraisal and wide shifts in public attitudes, has held onto capital punishment and protracted the internal debate.

In this country, the states are responsible for the administration of justice, but always under the umbrella of the U.S. constitution. The states can pass death penalty statutes, but the supreme court has the right to invalidate them.

In 1967, an unofficial moratorium took hold while the courts and legislators struggled to free themselves from the legal and moral thickets that had grown around the issue.

In a landmark 1972 ruling, the court found the death penalty of some 35 states unconstitutional, because the punishment was meted out too arbitrarily and unpredictably.

For a moment, the abolitionists rejoiced. But the states merely went back and refined their capital punishment laws.

In 1976, the court had to face the matter again, and this time it found that in three of five southern states which had passed new statutes, the ultimate penalty was constitutional.

Despite a sharp division among the justices, it was the first ruling that the constitution allowed the state to deprive its citizens of life in certain circumstances.

But in so doing, the court merely handed the whole mess back to the states and said in effect: "Pass your death penalty laws, but proceed carefully. We'll be here as referees."

This was bound to lead to problems, and it did. Last July, for example, Maryland enacted a law which said that the death penalty could be imposed on someone who commits murder while also committing "rape or a sexual offence in the first degree."

Because there was no comma after the word "rape" one judge found the phrase ambiguous, and used this ambiguity to justify a life sentence for murderer William Parker instead of death. The Parker case showed just how arbitrary the justice system still was, in relation to capital punishment.

This was an understatement. Two of the nine justices are outright abolitionists, and three or four of the others have swung both ways in past rulings. These sharp differences have made it difficult for the lower courts to act decisively in capital crimes.

As the system now stands, about 100 death sentences are handed down every year and the populations of the death rows swell. Because of the legal uncertainty over the death penalty and the appeal procedure, the backlog of cases grows every year.

"Something has to give," says Henry Schwarzschild, an expert on capital punishment with the American Civil Liberties Union. "In five or six years, we'll have 1,200 people on death row and only a handful of executions every year."

Schwarzschild, who also heads a national coalition against the death penalty, admits that the constitution, in careful reading, does allow for state executions.

Whites 1% on death row

"In principle it can be done, but in practice it can't. Because every time you impose the death penalty, it violates some other part of the constitution. The jurisprudence is very hazardous."

All legalisms aside, perhaps the most powerful argument against the way the U.S. now administers the death penalty is the discriminatory nature of the punishment.

Nearly half the convicts on death row in the country are non-white. Most of the victims in capital cases are white.

Based on actual arrest figures, these statistics tend to show, as some civil rights groups now argue, that "a higher value is placed on white lives than black lives."

"There are 20,000 homicides in this country every year. What we are doing is arbitrarily picking from a segment of the criminal community, often the poorest and the least intelligent, and executing them as tokens for crimes that are by no means worse than the crimes for which other people get life imprisonment."

A parochial view

Mark Hume's article Cook Drew Few Tourists in your May 16 edition completely missed the point as to the reasons British Columbia celebrated the Captain Cook bicentennial at all, and furthermore, he takes a very parochial and tunnel-vision look at the celebrations from a strictly Victorian point of view.

The Captain Cook bicentennial was initiated by an act of the legislature to commemorate the historic landing on our shores by Captain James Cook in 1778, bringing the first European influence to what is now British Columbia.

While historians may argue it was a chance landing caused by the fierce elements of nature, his sojourn at Resolution Cove was nevertheless to have a profound effect on the cultural, social and economic development of our part of the world over the 200 years following his visit. Indeed, had he not visited here, it is doubtful we would be English-speaking or if, in fact, our province would be named "British Columbia" at all.

From the outset, the Cook bicentennial was intended to be a many-faceted commemoration including cultural, historical, educational and ethnic celebrations throughout all of the province, and in this respect it was highly successful in that 93 per cent of the communities in B.C. participated in celebrations of one form or another. The demand for our "Captain Cook" personage was so great that we in fact had five "Captains Cook" to meet the requirements.

Contrary to Mr. Hume's inference, the celebrations were not simply an "intense tourist campaign" but certainly if tourism was to gain from the spinoff, the results were a welcome boost to our provincial economy.

Don't tell me the bicentennial attracted "few" tourists. The hundreds of daily drop-ins, phone calls and letters of enquiry we received in the bicentennial office are documented evidence of the thousands who came to B.C., not to mention the many thousands who turned out to witness the arrival of the tall ships in Victoria and Vancouver where over 350,000 people gathered along the beaches to see the Eagle, illuminated warships and a grand fireworks display.

Ironically, the ministry of travel industry's statistical survey questionaire failed to include "Captain Cook Bicentennial" as one of the multiple choice reasons for tourists coming to B.C. in 1978, and due to this omission it was impossible for them to determine how many tourists came to B.C. solely for the Captain Cook bicentennial, and it seems likely to me that this survey is the source of the Capital Regional District's planning study information.

In retrospect, the major concern I now hear from those elements involved in the travel industry is that the provincial government failed to keep the tourism ball rolling by not following up the bicentennial with annual ongoing events of cultural, historic, educational and ethnic significance so as to build a permanent inventory of annual events to attract tourists to our province.

It is no longer sufficient to point to our beautiful mountains, lakes and scenic wonders in B.C. to attract tourists. In many cases they are spending a great deal of money to come to B.C. and they want some destination activity to participate in when they arrive on our shores . . . like Captain Cook did. — Ed Sweeney, Executive Director post-temp, Captain Cook Bicentennial.

What's a hero?

It is a sad commentary on priorities and values of our Canadian society when a political meeting, a rally, a debate etc. has to be scheduled not to conflict with an NHL game, a CFL or NFL encounter, a baseball final, grand prix car racing, and so on.

The commentators of press, radio and TV too often call a "hero" the player who fires a puck in the net of the opposing team, or boots a decisive field goal, or runs all the way for a touchdown.

"Heroism" used to be quite a different thing. I would call a hero the fireman who, at the risk of his own life, enters a burning building to save a small child or an elderly adult trapped inside. I would call a hero the policeman who faces a disturbed and dangerous gunman armed with a rifle or a shotgun. I would call a hero the soldier who dies on a battle field in order that his country may be free from an invading enemy or from the danger of falling into the hands of dictators or revolutionaries.

Finally, I would call a hero a writer who has the courage of denouncing the evils of a country where freedom of expression is denied, knowing fairly well that his or her book may expose him or her to imprisonment, exile, torture, and even death.

But the professional athlete whose skill contributes to the victory of his team is no hero in the true sense of the much abused word. The very best in sport are those who undergo a very demanding, often lonely training, to participate in Olympic competitions for the sake of a medal that will honor their country.

It is because we have, somehow, lost out deep sense of values that our society in general and our political views in particular are less than mediocre. On the eve of deciding the course our nation is going to take for the next four years, we seemed more interested in following the New York Rangers-Montreal Canadiens play off than in the election of a prime minister and a number of candidates who will lead our Canada towards an era of either progress or stagnation, or even disaster! — E.J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Commission rebuts

To paraphrase your recent editorial The Bureaucracy Law, (Times, May 24) "There ought to be another law along the lines of the Peter Principle or Parkinson's Law and the Bureaucracy Law. It should state that every project begun, no matter how small and narrow, has at some stage an intrinsic tendency to be distorted and made controversial by the public press."

A perfect example is found in your recent treatment of the commission on education established by the Victoria school board.

So that the public may have an opportunity to consider the facts instead of the media fantasy which seems to have blossomed recently, may I make the following points:

☐ The recent request to the board by the commission for a change in the budget was merely an attempt to put a dollar value on services which the board agreed in the beginning to provide out of its own administration. This had not been done and so that we should be sure just what resources we had the commission requested a clarification.

☐ At the very first interview I had with the board regarding the work of the commission before any contract had been entered into, I made it absolutely clear that the work would require at least 18 months and that I would not undertake it under any other circumstances. To this the board agreed with the understanding that the commission would provide an interim report at the end of October.

☐ The suggestion to the board regarding honoraria for the commissioners was simply a suggestion that they might provide some recognition of a tangible nature to commission members for their work. This is common practice in most administrations at the present time.

☐ The board was also informed that it would be necessary to use contract services for the examination and evaluation of special areas of the program since evaluation by the administration itself, no matter how well carried out, would always be subject to some public questioning. Only an outside authority could be considered as thoroughly independent and objective. The board agreed that this procedure would be acceptable.

Finally, we acknowledge that our community, like many others, is split on educational issues. Many would suggest that it's also split on issues other than education. Surely that does not negate an honest effort to find some solution to our difficulties. The commission is prepared to try. — Bernard C. Gillie, Chairman, Commission on Education.

'There's no easy escape from nuclear option'

By NIGEL HAWKES
London Observer

The delicate balance between energy supply and demand, always an uneasy equilibrium, has tilted suddenly and alarmingly in the past few months. The revolution in Iran and its aftermath, and the nuclear accident at Harrisburg have combined to provide a severe and perhaps salutary shock.

Queues stretching for hundreds of yards around petrol stations in California and in Eire have brought back painful memories of 1974. Five years of economic stagnation and a consequent oil glut had bred complacency where there should have been concern.

At the same time, demonstrations against nuclear power have been bringing thousands on to the streets in America, in Germany and in Scotland. There remain a substantial minority of people resolutely opposed to nuclear power, and Harrisburg has multiplied their numbers.

Unfortunately, the five years since the last oil crisis has demonstrated one thing with distressing clarity: no immediate escape is possible from a world entirely dependent on oil, and increasingly dependent on nuclear power. This is to invite a shoal of letters varying from the pitying to the abusive, but I believe the figures justify the conclusion. In particular, the "benign and renewable" energy sources so beloved of the anti-nuclear lobby look rather less promising today than when serious work started on them after the last oil crisis.

There has been one clear winner: energy conservation. A number of studies have suggested, and some actual schemes have shown, that the best alternative source of energy is energy saving; but the degree to which its benefits will be realized depends too much on the snail-like pace at which a nation's housing stock is replaced for it ever to be a panacea.

As for the other alternatives, further study in almost every case has done little but emphasize how little energy they can provide, how slowly that energy can be tapped, and how expensive it is going to be.

Deliberately or through ignorance, some of the most strident of the anti-nuclear groups have yet to face up to the implications of these figures. It would be delightful to agree with Jane Fonda when she stands up in Washington and declares to an ecstatic audience that nuclear power is unnecessary and can be replaced by alternative sources; unfortunately, the facts suggests otherwise.

For the production of electricity, solar power is still two or three times too expensive to make commercial sense. For space and water heating, the gap is narrower, though in British conditions it is still far from economic. Those people who are putting solar panels on their roofs no doubt feel a warm glow of satisfaction, but at current fuel prices they are in fact wasting their money.

Even so, the sun remains a good deal more attractive than some other potential sources. Wave power, which can in theory produce large amounts of energy for Britain because the Atlantic coast of Scotland is blessed with very rough seas — especially during the winter — which coincide with the demand, appears from the first engineering estimates to be dismayingly expensive.

The figures produced by consultants and presented at last year's Wave Energy conference in London suggest that the present designs of wave power machines would produce electricity 50 times more expensive than existing sources like coal and nuclear. Now of course the designs can be refined and perhaps simplified, and hope is far from dead; but there is a dauntingly long way to go.

Wave power is mechanical engineering writ large. Huge devices the size of aircraft hangars would have to be constructed and kept in place against the fury of the winter storms. It may be possible but it is never likely to be cheap — as can be seen from the cost and complexity of the North Sea oil platforms, designed to extract an energy source far more concentrated than the waves.

More encouraging, but also more limited in scale, are the possibilities of using heat from the earth itself, probably in the form of warm water, to heat houses or flats. There have already been some successful schemes. A block of flats near Paris, for example, draws water at 55 degrees C from a well 1,700 metres deep. The water is used to heat the flats and to provide hot water through heat exchangers.

Later this year Britain's first attempt to tap geothermal hot water is expected to go ahead near Southampton. A hole 3,000 metres deep will be drilled in the search for water hot enough to be useful.

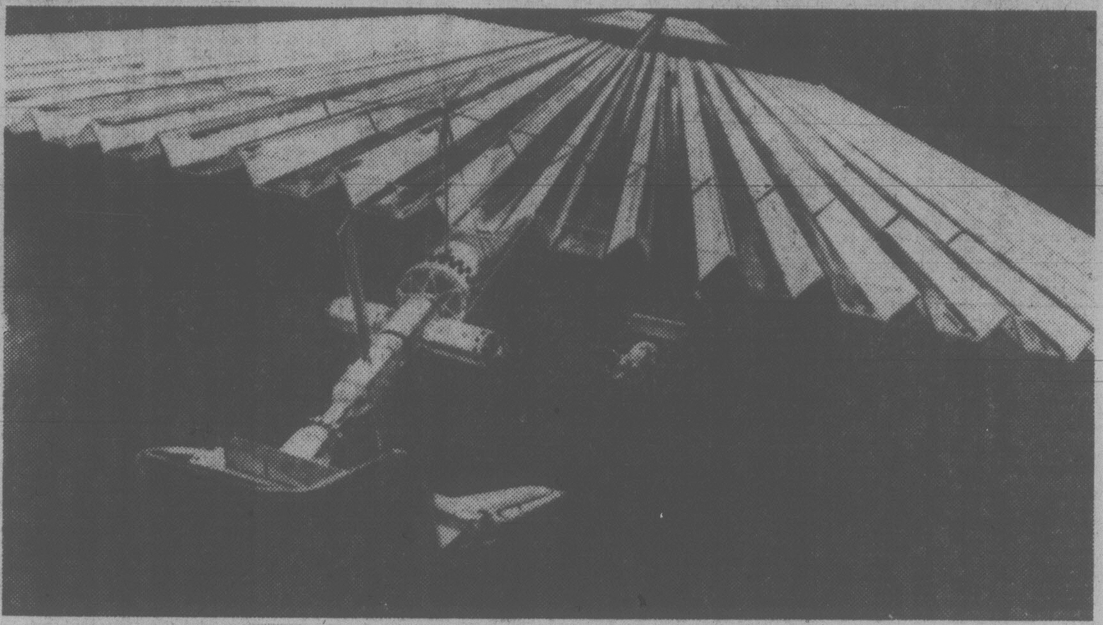
But the number of suitable sites is always likely to be limited, and the supply of hot water not inexhaustible; a successful well might last for 50 years. American work using hot dry rocks into which water is injected, heated, and then recovered, is progressing well and if the project works the number of geothermal sites might be greatly increased. (Britain has some dry hot rocks in the granites of Cornwall.)

Tidal power is a perennial hope, but one that seems exasperatingly to be always just out of reach. As costs of conventional fuels rise, so does the cost of building huge barrages across estuaries like the Severn. So, despite the 1974 oil price increases, the Severn Barrage scheme still appears to be uneconomic by a factor of two or three. The Severn Barrage Committee currently at work may be able to refine these figures somewhat; but, like solar power, one would only invest in the Severn scheme if one expected conventional fuels to increase dramatically in real terms. There could also be some strong environmental objections, of course.

Wind power could be a useful source in special circumstances, but is almost certainly too unreliable for general use. It too suffers from severe environmental drawbacks; giant gantries strung across the countryside would make the present electricity pylons look diminutive. Ecological it may be; but it would also be an eyesore.

What this means is that there is no easy escape from the nuclear option, however much some pressure groups would like us to believe there is. Coal plus conservation offers perhaps the most feasible alternative strategy, if people can be found to dig up enough coal at the right price. And that is a very big if.

As for oil, there still seems no easy escape from the grip of OPEC. More realistic energy pricing in the U.S. would help to cut demand and to increase production, thereby easing the problem for everybody else; but the past five years have shown just how reluctant the American public is to face the facts of life. That is why a few gasoline queues may be no bad thing.



The cost would be astronomical for this proposed solar power satellite

Is fusion the answer?

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
New York Times

Nearly half a century ago, the bright dream was born that man could harness the inexhaustible power of the atom to light his life, power his industries and build a brave new world.

Growing difficulties have beset nuclear power, however, and public acceptance of the atomic age, already wavering, suffered a body blow this spring at Three Mile Island. While even experts disagreed vigorously on the real dangers of the Pennsylvania accident, one result appeared certain: Large numbers of Americans wanted nothing more to do with nuclear fission and its poisonous byproducts.

But what about the other kind of nuclear energy, fusion? At a glance, almost everything about fusion looks attractive. Its fuel is hydrogen, not some dangerous metal that must be imported from a potentially hostile country. Hydrogen is the most abundant element, and the world's oceans are filled with it.

A fusion reaction yields energy more efficiently than fission, and generates far less of the radioactive garbage that has given fission a bad name.

In fact, fusion energy promises so many benefits that both the United States and the Soviet Union are spending many billions of dollars to harness it.

But what are the prospects?

There is general agreement among scientists that fusion energy will probably not be much benefit to any human being now alive. In fact, no laboratory has yet proved that fusion can be made to happen at all on this earth, except in the instantaneous and uncontrollable form of a hydrogen bomb.

How do fission and fusion differ, and why is the latter so much more difficult to achieve?

Fission is the breaking apart of the nucleus of an atom into two or more smaller chunks. The weight of these pieces adds up to less than the original weight of the whole nucleus, because some of the mass is converted into energy. The immense amount of energy yielded by a small conversion of mass was predicted by Einstein's famous equation $E=mc^2$.

Fission occurs spontaneously in nature and can be made to happen by man, either instantaneously, as in an atomic bomb, or more slowly, as in a nuclear steam plant. Chain reactions of the fission kind are easy to start and control.

Nothing about fusion is easy, however,

Part of the difficulty is in the fuel it must burn. This fuel is not ordinary hydrogen gas but hydrogen atoms heated to such an astronomical temperature that their orbiting electrons are ripped away. Hydrogen in this form is known as a "plasma."

Fusion is the reverse of fission. Light atomic nuclei must be forced to join together to form heavy nuclei, and to do this huge amounts of energy must be used to prime the pump before any additional energy can be taken out. Fusion begins only at temperatures of millions of degrees.

A temperature that high poses stupendous difficulties. If a super-hot plasma were even to touch any tangible material container, it would instantly lose so much heat as to quench its fusion.

Soviet and American scientists have focused their efforts on two main approaches. In the older Soviet-designed apparatus, the plasma fuel is heated and confined inside a magnetic field so that it theoretically need never touch any material object. Enormous machines have been built to do this, notably the doughnut-shaped Tokamaks and the newer mirror confinement machines, which bounce particles of plasma between magnetic fields.

True fusion has never been achieved in any of these machines. Last year at Princeton University a temperature of 74 million degrees centigrade was achieved in a magnetic confinement apparatus, but though this temperature was high enough for fusion, the density of the plasma fuel was too low.

A combination of high temperature with relatively high density is required, and this has invariably caused "instabilities" in the magnetic bottle that holds the plasma together while it is compressed and heated. For reasons not yet understood, the invisible magnetic field becomes warped and deformed by the stellar heat and pressure of the plasma it contains, and such warping invariably prevents fusion.

The other approach to controlled fusion reaction is inertial confinement. Hydrogen is confined in glass capsules the size of pinheads, which are positioned one at a time, like machine gun cartridges, in the focus of a cluster of powerful laser beams. The beams are pulsed simultaneously into the capsule, which is vaporized, sending a shock wave inward, compressing and eating its hydrogen charge.

The force of the imploding shock wave is supposed to be great enough to bring the hydrogen to fusion conditions and create a pint-sized thermonuclear explosion, whose energy can be soaked up by the surrounding container. So far, this system has also failed to produce fusion.

Some scientists believe controlled fusion will never be achieved. Others feel it can be done in time; Soviet Nobel laureate Pyotr L. Kapista predicts fusion may become practical about one century from now, while John M. Deutch, U.S. assistant secretary of energy, recently estimated that by the year 2020 fusion energy might begin to come into commercial use. Some fusion enthusiasts believe success might come even sooner if the government would spend more money on research.

If so, will America have finally found its energy Eldorado? Many experts fear not. An assessment of fusion possibilities was made recently by Battelle Pacific Northwest Laboratory, one of the main consultants in nuclear energy serving the government and private industry. A consensus at Battelle is that while fusion is well worth pursuing, it will never be the dream energy imagined by some, nor will it be entirely free of the hazards posed by fission.

Dr. Bowen R. Leonard Jr., a senior scientist at the laboratory, said that, despite the cheapness of hydrogen, a fusion generating plant might prove to be prohibitively expensive to build and operate.

"At fusion conditions," he said, "a reactor would be producing neutrons with an energy of 14 million electron volts. Radiation at that level destroys the strength of steel or other structural materials by producing helium and hydrogen inside the metal's crystalline structure, making it dangerously brittle very fast. Can you imagine how that would break down a reactor plant? Parts would have to be replaced constantly and shutdowns would be frequent."

It won't be easy

While a fusion reactor would produce smaller quantities of dangerous byproducts, some nuclear garbage would be inevitable. Radioactive metals and other dangeous substances can be built up by the fusion of small atoms, just as they can be created by the fission of large ones.

The fuel for a fusion reactor may turn out to be neither cheap nor inexhaustible. No way is known to cause the ordinary hydrogen atom to join with a fellow hydrogen atom. Instead, varieties of hydrogen must be used whose nuclei contain extra neutrons. (Ordinary hydrogen has a nucleus consisting of only one proton with no neutrons.) These extra-neutron varieties (known as isotopes) are available in two forms: deuterium (with one neutron), which can be extracted from sea water, and tritium (with two neutrons), which must be made artificially by bombarding the metal lithium with nuclear particles.

The most optimistic scientists believe that some day a way can be found for sustaining a fusion reaction using only deuterium, supplies of which are presumably plentiful (there is nearly an ounce in every ton of water in the world). But until such a way is found, fusion would be limited to a mixture of deuterium and trituim. That would mean that tritium supplies eventually would run out as reserves of the lithium from which it is made are exhausted.

Experts think that might happen in 1,000 years — about the same time reserves of uranium can be expected to last, provided uranium is conserved by using it only in breeder reactors. (A breeder produces more plutonium than the uranium it consumes, but because plutonium can be made into weapons, President Carter has banned its use in the U.S.)

Would fusion provide cheaper energy than fission? Many experts think not. Even if the use of expensive, man-made tritium fuel can be avoided, the cost of building and maintianing a fusion plant is likely to be at least twice that of a fission plant.

The great hope, as ever, is that some now unforeseen scientific breakthrough will yield the ultimte energy prize for America and the world.

"After all," one scientist said, "who would have guessed at the turn of the century that atomic energy could have come as far as it has already? Never underrate the potential of science to do the seemingly impossible."

Of mudsnoots and hagoos

By ROGER ROSENBLATT
Washington Post

Were Margaret Trudeau not a prisoner of her times she would have replied differently to TV interviewer Jane Pauley the other morning, when Miss Pauley insinuated there had been a love affair with Teddy Kennedy. She would not have simply sat there, whispering in her flower-child huff: "I'm insulted that you bring it up." She would have said straight out: "You know, Jane, you really are a slut-faced rat to bring that up. And if it weren't for your blackened teeth and foul breath, I'd punch you in that putrid mouth right now." Or something like that.

But of course it never occurred to Mrs. Trudeau to say such a thing. Even if she were not the hippie Gerald Ford (who can do nothing right, including confession), it still would be too much to expect her to have acted reasonably in that situation, and to have heaped scorn upon her adverary. For nobody heaps scorn anymore. You hear yourself being stretched over some verbal rack, and your eyes squeeze tight, and you make two fists, and your tongue shoots to the roof of your mouth, yet all that comes out is a tepid peep: "I'm insulted that you bring it up." Or something like that.

I tell you, friends, we're done for. When people lose the knack and the will to curse each other out face to face, the civilization's done for. Oh, we haven't lost the ability to curse each other out face to back, and back to back, That's no trick. And we will always yell obscenities from the seats of cars, as a matter of custom. But to square off and tell some jackass to his jackass ears where to go and what to do when he gets there — ah, what a lovely, heartening thing that is.

And we have lost it. And we all know why.

First, there was psychology. When you reply to an accuser, "I'm insulted that you bring it up," the burden of the insult falls to the insulted. Only in a guilt-ridden world is the issue whether or not you're in a state of being insulted, when clearly the point is that someone else was swine enough to do the insulting. Instead of firing back, you cuddle up in your own feelings. The psychologists did that.

Then there was sociology. Elsewhere in the interview, Mrs. Trudeau referred to some other insult as a vicious thing to say. Who cares how the statement is characterized? Not by a long shot, she. The point, again, is not that in the fascinating world of social discourse a vicious statement was made. The point is that some dirty, son-of-a-vicious made it. Yet, the statement is categorized. The sociologists did that.

And then there was liberalism. You do not call anyone a bastard anymore, because bastards are unfortunates. And you do not call anyone an animal anymore, because animals have their rights. And as for giving people sexual instructions, well, some people may enjoy the unusual activities you suggest, and who is to say what is acceptable behavior?, and I'm insulted that you bring it up. The liberals did that.

TRUDEAU . . . missed chance

And finally, there was realism, and the accompanying loss of imagination. The poet Swinburne once wrote Emerson, calling him a "wrinkled and toothless baboon" who "spits and sputters on a filthy platform of his own finding and fouling." For Swinburne that was a mere slap on the wrist. And Bach once pulled a dagger on one of his music pupils, calling him a Zippelfaggotist, which only meant a bassonist who produced the sounds of a nanny-goat, but at least it had flavor. Now, thanks to sterile modernity, the flavor is cardboard. We don't even have the words for invective anymore, much less the time.

Yet language lost can be regained, if there is only the courage. And if we've grown too timid to use the good old words, why not use some of the good ancient ones? There are plenty of early English words that have been snoozing in drawers for centuries, awaiting resuscitation, such as collybist (miser) and hogoo (stench) and jackpudding (buffoon). Not to mention: jemmy (fop), strutiloquence (prattle), ninnybroth (simpleton) and dorbel (nitwit). Add to these a few archaic slang words, such as donnicker (toilet), loogan (sap), Percy pants (sissy), nougat (nut). Or a mudsnoot (pig). Or a high cockalorum (big shot). Or a dit-da artist (merely a short-wave radio operator, but it sounds worse).

With words like these back in action, we could reclaim both our vitality and self-respect. With words like these Mrs. Trudeau could have called Miss Pauley a hodgepoker (mischief-maker), and Miss Pauley could have retaliated by calling Mrs. Trudeau a donnicker, or a donnicker with a hogoo. Then they could have all gone to town, screaming dorbel and ninnybroth and loogan at each other until their faces glowed red, and the floor shook, and the chairs sprawled, and the air sang with clarity and honor and all the wonderful sounds that distinguished Man from the mudsnoot.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was down fractionally in active mid-afternoon trading.

Trading in shares of Brascan Ltd. A resumed at 10:47 a.m. after a delay at the opening for dissemination of news that Edper Equities Ltd. has offered $28 a share for five million shares of Brascan A to bring its holdings to more than 50 per cent. The stock rose ⅜ to $24 by 2 p.m.

Trading in shares of Bonanza Oil and Gas Ltd. was halted at 1:53 p.m. pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $7⅝.

A trading halt in shares of Argosy Mining Corp. Ltd. continued pending an announcement. The stock last traded at 80 cents.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said common shares of Mountain States Resources Ltd. will be posted for trading without par value in the oil and gas category at the opening June 8. Five million shares will be listed, of which 4.042 million are outstanding and 633,000 are subject to issuance.

Among industrials, Cominco fell 1⅞ to $37, Union Gas A ¾ to $10, Seagram Co. ¾ to $36¾, Noranda Mines A ¾ to $40½ and Canadian Pacific ¼ to $31⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was slightly lower today, struggling to stabilize after Wednesday's sharp drop.

Before the opening the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators fell 3.3 per cent in April.

That marked the largest decline in more than 4½ years for the index, which is designed to detect evidence of the future course of the economy.

One group which moved against the trend was the gold-mining stocks, aided by a sharp rise in world bullion prices.

Dome Mines gained 3⅜ to $112⅜; Campbell Red Lake ¾ to $39; Homestake ¼ to $33⅝, and ASA ¼ to $28⅛.

Marriott led the active list, off ⅛ to $14⅞. A 264,000-share block traded at $15.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — Equities on the London stock market were generally above the day's lows in quiet trading. Gold shares rose sharply following the record bullion price, dealers said. The Financial Times index was unavailable. Oil issues were weaker. Major industrials were mainly lower. Canadian issues were mixed with an easier bias.

—VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange with volume at 10:51 a.m. at 2,014,228 shares.

In the industrials, Ardiem Industrial Corp. was unchanged at .25 on 5,000 shares.

Schools prober pleads for more time, money

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

An 18-month study of Greater Victoria School District's education needs could be abandoned before completion, education commission chairman Bernard Gillie told a public hearing Wednesday night.

Gillie said the life of the seven-member commission is only guaranteed until the next school board election.

"It's conceivable a future board will decide to cancel," he told about 20 people gathered at Hampton elementary school.

Gillie is receiving a monthly salary of $2,000 and the commission was given a $33,850 budget by the board.

The commission will hand in an interim report in October but needs at least another year to finish the job, he said.

Meanwhile the next board elected in November could decide to cut off funding.

Gillie has suggested a budget increase of $10,200 and remuneration for the other six members, currently working on a volunteer basis.

So far the board has rejected both suggestions.

Gillie said the commission's task is to help the board determine where the system is now, where it should be going and how to get there.

A parent in the audience told the commission most people "don't give a damn" about what goes on in the public school system and her voice echoed off the walls the near-empty gymnasium.

Judged in terms of numbers, the hearing was not successful, but those who did show up to air views on education in School District 61 took full advantage of the opportunity.

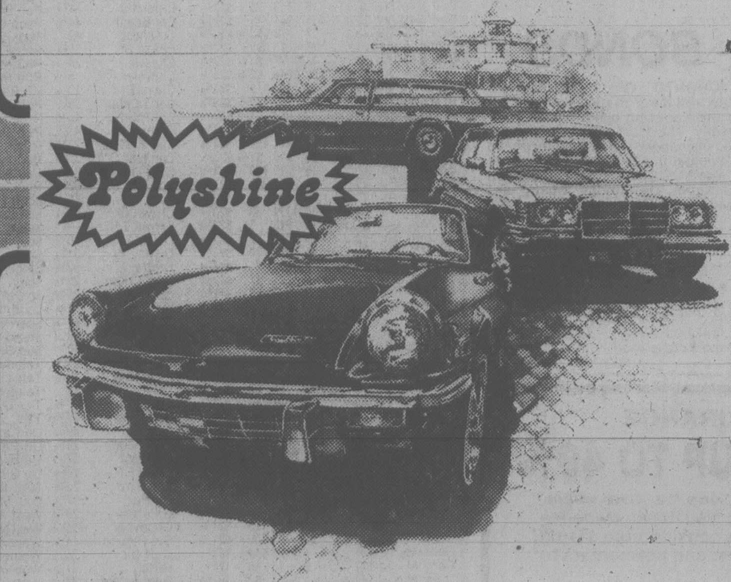
Only one formal brief, on textbook racism, was presented; but vocal criticism from the tiny group clustered in the front rows included complaints about the high dropout rate, inadequate teacher training and an elitist academic philosophy that all but ignores vocational programs.

The meeting was scheduled to take place between 8 and 10:30 p.m., but was adjourned after one-and-a-half hours.

Pranab Kumar Bhattacharjee said in his brief many approved text books are riddled with racial prejudice, particularly about Asian peoples, and called for the commission to recommend a full scale purge.

The commission will also be examining district records, evaluating individual programs, interviewing parents, students and staff and holding more public hearings.

The next hearing will be held at Richmond elementary school June 5 at 8 p.m.



Polyshine Franchises are Now Available in this area

A Polyshine franchise is an investment alternative with a number of advantages. It's a source of independent employment. A tax shelter, an income producer and a portfolio balancer.

Polyshine is a combination of carefully selected petroleum base products that are totally acceptable to all automotive paint exteriors and chrome.

Polyshine is NOT A WAX, but a protective sealant that must be applied professionally in a Polyshine Centre. The product is guaranteed for as long as one owns the vehicle to which it has been applied.

The Automotive After-care Market is practically unlimited. There are more than 10 million vehicles being produced annually, all increasing in price. So it makes sense to protect this investment.

The Polyshine System is an exciting one, and to the successful applicant could prove to be a very lucrative venture indeed. Our centres are just as profitable for absentee owners as well.

You will receive assistance and direction in every area of your business including:
Location assistance Operational assistance
Center Preparation Advertising
Training Accounting

This is an excellent opportunity to develop your own business in one of the most rapidly expanding areas of our economy.

C of C stresses need for air link

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria is in danger of losing out to Vancouver in the tug-of-war for provincial government jobs unless a decision is made quickly on how to improve downtown-to-downtown air services, Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Mel Cooper warned today.

"We must make it easier for citizens to get to Victoria or we can not maintain our status as capital city," he said.

Politicians will be able to make a strong case for establishing government services in Vancouver because of the isolated position of Victoria.

Cooper delivered the warning in an interview after judging Wednesday's test flight of the Dash 7 STOL plane to be a success.

The blue-and-white De Havilland plane flew low over the city for more than an hour Wednesday afternoon so Transport Canada could take decibel readings of noise levels. The chamber also asked citizens to report on their reaction to the noise level.

"The plane passed the noise test with flying colors," Cooper said.

Only one of the first 25 calls received was negative. The rest said they could hardly hear the plane, although it was flying low over the city.

"Now that the test has been completed we must get on with the decision," Cooper said.

A federal-provincial report on the feasibility of STOL service for Victoria was due last year, was later delayed until spring and now is not expected before the end of June.

Waiting in the wings are rival proposals from Okanagan Helicopters to operate a downtown-to-downtown service and a plan by AirWest to upgrade its service.

Cooper said the chamber of commerce has not yet voted on which of the three proposals to support, pending receipt of the much-delayed STOL report.

But there must be no further delays because the economic viability of Victoria depends upon improved transportation services, he said.

"Businessmen, municipal officials, union leaders — thousands of people want to deal in person with their government and we must not frustrate that wish."

The Dash 7 test followed a sales pitch by De Havilland president John Sandford at a chamber-sponsored meeting at The Empress Wednesday.

Sandford said the Dash 7 can land on a baseball field, if necessary, as it requires only a makeshift runway of about 2,000 feet. It can land on sand, grass or rough gravel.

Work Point would be an ideal location for a STOL airport in Victoria, he said.

(The federal-provincial study is expected to deal with the problems of finding a suitable site on the Vancouver side. One De Havilland official earlier suggested the Dash 7 could begin service by flying from downtown Victoria to Vancouver International Airport.)

The Dash 7s could be delivered in Victoria in 1981 at $5.8 million each, Sandford said.

A network of routes could also connect Victoria, Vancouver, Port Alberni, Comox and Powell River, he said.

Road blocks to halt milfoil

The provincial environment ministry plans road checks throughout most of B.C. to look for Eurasian milfoil water weed that is choking Okanagan lakes and spreading to the Fraser River system.

The ministry said in a news release today that motorists will be stopped and vehicles checked in an effort to prevent the milfoil from being transported around the province.

The checks will be set up this summer in the Okanagan, Vancouver area and Vancouver Island.

Automobile and trailer tires will be checked along with boats to prevent the spread of the weed.

UVic child care head selected

The University of Victoria has selected Dr. Roy Ferguson, former director of the department of psychology at Alberta Children's Hospital in Calgary, as head of its new school of child care.

Acting director Dr. Frances Ricks will step down July 1 when Dr. Ferguson assumes his duties in UVic's faculty of human and social development.

In 1973 Dr. Ferguson set up the psychology department in the Alberta Children's Hospital and also set up a number of child care training programs for community colleges in that province.

Dr. Ferguson has held concurrent positions in the departments of psychology, educational psychology and medicine at the University of Calgary.

Other officers elected were: Murray Farmer, Mutual Equipment Rentals Ltd., vice-president, Jake Sangha, O.K. Trucking Ltd., secretary treasurer.

Solar energy leader to speak

Gold hits a record while dollar slumps

LONDON (AP) — Gold reacted to poor U.S. trade figures and jumped about $8 to reach a record $277.875 U.S. an ounce today. The U.S. dollar declined.

Gold was up 25 cents from the previous record — $277.625 in Zurich at noon on Tuesday before a bout of profit-taking sent the price down.

Gold closed at $270.625 in London Wednesday and at $269.875 in Zurich. Then the U.S. commerce department announced the United States had an April trade deficit of $2.15 billion, the worst since January.

A widening trade deficit weakens the U.S. currency abroad and drives investors to buy gold, a traditional hedge in times of monetary uncertainty.

Paris — 4.41725 French francs, down from 4.43025.

Milan — 853 Italian lire, down from 856.50.

Amsterdam — 2.0855 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0985.

In London it took $2.0657 to buy a British pound compared with $2.06075 late Wednesday.

In Montreal Wednesday, the U.S. dollar closed at $1.1604, up 1-10.

Big earthquake kills 18 east of Java

JAKARTA (AP) — A earthquake measuring 6.7 on the Richter scale has killed at least 18 persons and injured 44 others on the Indonesian island of Lombok, east of Java and Bali, authorities said today.

The quake late Wednesday afternoon, which was centred along the western coast of Lombok, sent residents and tourists fleeing out of doors on the holiday island of Bali, 40 kilometres to the west. There were no reports of casualties on Bali, however.

Gov. Gatot Suherman reported by telephone that rescue teams were looking for more dead and injured in the ruins of Lombok homes, office buildings and schools ravaged by the five-second tremor.

He said of 16 of the 44 injured found so far were in serious condition. About 116 homes, eight mosques and four school buildings were badly damaged, he reported.

It was the second severe quake to hit Lombok within 10 days. An official of the national meteorological department said a tremor measuring 6.3 on the Richter scale was felt on May 21 but there were no casualties.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one whole number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. A quake registering 6 is capable of causing severe damage, while one registering 7 is a major quake capable of widespread heavy damage.

Year-long slump now U.S. fear

revised the March figure from a 0.5 percent decline to a 0.3 percent increase. Had that revision not been made, this would have been the fourth monthly decline in a row.

The indicator contributing most to the total decline in the economic index, the department said, was the average workweek of manufacturing workers, which declined by 1.7 hours to 39.1 hours.

Economists have been sharply divided on what lies ahead.

The administration says the economy is beginning to slow down. But Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller and chief economic adviser Charles Schultze all predict only a slowing of the growth of the economy — not a recession, which means a shrinking of the economy.

In a related development that could have wide economic repercussions, a federal judge ruled here today that President Carter overstepped his constitutional powers by using economic sanctions to enforce his wage-price guidelines — a decision the nation's anti-inflation chief said will be appealed immediately.

"This is an obvious blow to us," Alfred Kahn, Carter's inflation watchdog, said, "but is does not strike down wage and price guidelines. They are alive and well — I guarantee it."

He said the government promptly will appeal U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker's ruling upholding a motion by the AFL-CIO and 10 unions that the crucial part of Carter's anti-inflation program must be voided.

Strickland and trusty Speed Graphic way back when

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Pioneer Victoria press photographer Irving Strickland, 70, who spent his entire career working for the Times, retired today.

"Flash" Strickland worked a total of 55 years, 10 months, as office boy, secretary, sports reporter and cameraman, thought to be a record term for continuous employment with a single newspaper. The time does not include two years spent as a carrier boy before joining the paper's regular staff.

Strickland was born in Boston in 1908, one of five children of Newfoundland parents. His father was a marine blacksmith who worked for the CPR and in shipyards, and brought the family here in 1914.

As a schoolboy Strickland peddled papers in Victoria West for $11.50 a month, and saved enough to buy a $60 bicycle.

"I didn't think I'd live long enough to pay for it," Strickland recalled, never realizing he'd eventually outlast everyone on the paper.

He was office boy at 15, started taking pictures nearly 50 years ago and became Victoria's first press photographer in 1934, going on to make a name for himself with fire and disaster pictures.

City's first full-time newspaper cameraman

In recognition of his contribution to press photography he is a life member of the press photographers' association in North America.

When Strickland was hired Aug. 1, 1923, as full-time staff in the old Times building at Fort and Broad, department store proprietor David Spencer was owner and Benny Nicholas was editor. Nicholas had been secretary to Times founder William Templeman, then MP for Victoria, and came to know a lot of influential people. He was himself an influential editor, visited by notables and often away from town on engagements.

He began taking snapshots with a folding Kodak, took it on tours with Nicholas, and persuaded the editor to buy a camera for the paper instead of relying on a commercial photographer.

"It was so cold in the winter you had to work with your overcoat on," he recalls.

Photographing the greats was taken in stride, and Strickland said he found the bigger the person, the easier it was to take the picture.

Through his lens Strickland has seen VIPs from Lt.-Gov. Randolph Bruce, and Premier John Oliver, and prime ministers from W.L. Mackenzie King to the present. There was Franklin D. Roosevelt, George VI, opera and movie stars and sports personalities through generals and tycoons.

Among the standouts he ranks Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Arthur Fiedler and Yehudi Menuhin.

"They never had any money to pay me, but it was a good news contact."

During the Second World War Strickland was declared medically unfit. Instead of shooting a gun he remembers shooting people with infra-red film in the blackout and hoarding flashbulbs which were nearly impossible to buy.

"Firemen, helicopter pilots, high steel men and crane operators are his favorite people," a colleague said nearly two decades ago.

"He rarely needs to show the press sign on his car." The police all know it on sight.

Strickland holds citations from professional firefighters, is an honorary life member of Victoria Firefighters Association and a pioneering life member of the National Press Photographers Association.

"I've loved the whole thing. I loved the people I worked for, I loved the public and I'd love to do it all over again," he said the other day.

"But I've seen editors, publishers and wise men from the east, and I've seen them go. Now it's my turn to go."

Newspaper management and staff recognized Strickland's final working day with presentations in the newsroom this afternoon. They included the last Speed Graphic press camera used by the Times for a quarter century.

In honor of the pioneer photographer, his colleagues and many of the people with whom he has associated over the half-century will gather next month for a farewell reception arranged by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

Slim approval for scaled down industrial park

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Neighborhood objections were brushed aside in favor of broader considerations — the economy, jobs and a richer municipal tax base — as Saanich council gave 5-4 approval Wednesday night to a proposal for a scaled-down industrial park in the Vanalman-Glanford area of Royal Oak.

The decision came 14 months after council had rejected by the same vote margin an earlier proposal for a larger industrial park.

On that occasion Mayor Mel Couvelier had voted in opposition, but Wednesday night he joined Aldermen Geoff Vantreight, David Paterson, Fred Severson and Sandy Noel in supporting the compromise plan.

This would see about 39 acres in the northwest corner of the site developed for mixed-density residential use, with the remaining 90 acres both east and west of Glanford rezoned light industrial.

Under the original proposal the entire 129 acres would have been designated for various industrial uses, including warehousing, wholesaling and wholesale distribution.

During the marathon hearing, where opponents of industry outnumbered supporters by at least seven to one, Couvelier denied charges from the Royal Oak Community Association that he had betrayed the trust of the electorate by reversing his stand on the controversial issue.

He claimed the compromise plan was vastly different from the one considered earlier, adding: "It isn't the same by a country mile."

The original proposal entailed a greater element of risk because there was uncertainty that the industrial land would be developed, and in any case he was convinced that Interurban was a better site.

COUVELIER
. . . 'quick in-filling'

But the Interurban proposal was defeated and subsequently Saanich held a referendum on the industrial park question.

Couvelier said he was assured by one of Canada's "top pollsters" (Dr. Dan Koenig of the University of Victoria) that the referendum results showed clearly that a majority of Saanich residents favored the Royal Oak site.

He also claimed the reduced acreage in the latest scheme would assure "relatively quick in-filling of the land," and rejected arguments that the 280-acre industrial park at Keating Cross Road in Central Saanich made the Royal Oak park unnecessary.

Many firms would be deterred by the extra distance and transportation costs entailed in using the Central Saanich industrial reserve, he said.

Couvelier was not on the defensive throughout the evening. He strongly criticized the executive of the Royal Oak Community Association for stating publicly that Glanford would have to be widened to four lanes if the industrial park went ahead.

The mayor described such statements as an irresponsible distortion of the facts, designed to be provocative and inflammatory. He insisted that he had always been opposed to widening Glanford to four lanes, although he wanted to see the road upgraded.

But neighborhood concern about the disruptive effect of road projects prompted council, earlier in the hearing, to pass two resolutions.

One abandoned a proposal to reserve the right-of-way for a new east-west road from the Patricia Bay Highway to Carey at Roy. The other assured residents that there is no intention of making Glanford a four-lane arterial.

Most residents who spoke at the public hearing said they were willing to accept industry on the 40-acre wedge flanking the Pat Bay Highway, but opposed to industrial development of the larger, bowl-contoured area west of Glanford and north of Kay.

Many of the arguments were similar to those raised at the 1978 hearing, predicting noise from trucks delivering at all hours of the night, traffic hazards, depreciated property values and a general deterioration of the quality of life.

But one of the speakers in favor of the proposal, Greater Victoria industrial development commissioner Barry Mayhew, urged council not to give neighborhood groups the "right of veto" over a development that would benefit the entire region.

Arson probe started

A fire that caused $9,000 damage to an apartment at 2502 Dowler Place Wednesday night was probably deliberately set, deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said today.

He said there are indications paper may have been piled on a chesterfield in Suite 003 and set on fire.

Several tenants in the four-storey block smelled smoke and turned in the alarm at 10:47 p.m.

Occupants Vincent Shaughnessy and his wife Jamie were not at home at the time but returned just as firemen were mopping up.

Firemen managed to contain the fire to the suite.

Goalkeeper John Lewis of Coquitlam Adanacs blocks shot from Shamrocks Dan Green (7)

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Victoria Shamrocks moved into second place in the Western Lacrosse Association Wednesday night, but in winning 16-11 over Coquitlam Adanacs at Memorial Arena the Rocks were also losers.

Goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer suffered a concussion when felled by a shot by Moe Jodoin of the Adanacs in the first period and will be lost to the club for an indefinite period.

Smeltzer went down as if pole-axed at the 18:03 minute mark of the period when Jodoin's shot hit him in the face mask, broke it and bruised Smeltzer's forehead.

Smeltzer finished out the period and played the second, but was replaced by Scott Marshall in the third.

Smeltzer said he never saw the shot that hit him, but that afterwards he started seeing double.

Earlier in the week, Smeltzer had undergone oral surgery and was feeling below par as it was.

The Shamrocks will replace Smeltzer with Al Radley of Equimalt's senior B team, for tonight's game at Nanaimo. Radley is a former member of Victoria McDonalds of the Western Canada Major Junior League.

Also on the injured list is veteran Joe McCrea who suffered stretched ligaments on Monday. He is expected to be out of the lineup for about three to four weeks.

Victory for the Shamrocks leapfrogged them over the Adanacs into second place. It was their second win of the week, having beaten Nanaimo Timbermen here on Monday, their highest goal output and evened their season record at 4-4-1.

The Irish started out running and gunning. They scord the first three goals through Chris Hall, Dan Green and Dennis Somner, gave two back to Coquitlam by Gord Quilty and Moe Jodoin around Hall's second goal. They finished the period with markers by Andy Reid, with his first of two, and Bob Cool, also with his first of two, to take a 7-2 lead after one.

Reid gave the Irish an 8-2 margin early in the second and it appeared a rout may be in order. But then, as they so often do, the Rocks let up, or perhaps Smeltzer's condition had something to do with it. He was a trifle shaky, giving up seven goals.

The Adanacs came back on Jodoin's second goal, two shorthanded goals by Dan Wilson, the former Burnaby junior star, and three powerplay goals to move within two at 11-9 by the end of the period.

Gerry Cadwallader and Ranjit Dillon put the Irish up by four again but the Adanacs weren't through.

Dave Cochrane and Dave Durante cut the margin to two and it remained that way until Dillon, with his second, gave the Irish a working margin and a 14-11 lead at 10:58. Cool got his second less than a minute later and Jim Lynch the final tally at 19:01.

Cool, Dillon, Lynch, Hall and Reid all had two-goal performances while Rick Baker, Steve Buckley, Cadwallader, Green, Norm Baker and Somner had singles.

Wilson and Jodoin each had the hat trick for Coquitlam while singles went to Mark Valastin, Dave Durante, Cochrane, Matt Aiken and Quilty scored singles.

Coach Bob Salt of the Adanacs was disappointed with the inconsistent play of his team, but he still feels the A's will be a power this season.

"I don't think New Westminster will get any better than they are now," he said of the league leaders, "and I still feel that it will be between the Shamrocks and us when it gets down to the final issue."

Nothing new was announced regarding any possible deal for Kevin Alexander, but a Shamrock official said negotiations were still going on and there may be an announcement later this week.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, Alan Kirk scored three goals including the winner with 4:16 remaining to give Burrards a 15-14 win over Nanaimo Timberman.

Ron Pinder and Pat Ryan also scored three goals for the Burrards who entered the third period trailing 9-8.

Ron Sage paced the Nanaimo attack with three goals. Pete Rushton, Mike Walsh, Ron McNeil and Gord Racette each tallied twice and Randy Noble, Doug Angrove and Brian Evans added singles.

Everyone admires Ty Stofflet, but Canada beat him—twice!

This is just to set the record straight.

There is an interesting and an excellent article in the current issue of Sports Illustrated on Ty Stofflet, who is acclaimed as one of the all-time great softball pitchers in the United States and also that he may be the best left-hander ever, both of which he may be — in the U.S.

But somewhere along the line in detailing Stofflet's exploits, SI doesn't get to the point that, as good as Stofflet is, he was beaten twice by Canada (nee Victoria Bates) in the world softball championships in New Zealand in 1976, while winning one from the Canadian squad. And one of the Canadian pitchers is a pretty fair lefthander too. Pete Landers by name.

In the story is the notation that besides Stofflet winning that 20-inning no-hit classic game against New Zealand . . . "Stofflet also won the three other games he pitched in the world championships . . .".

Well, that's not true.

The first Canadian win over the U.S. and Stofflet came on Feb. 2 when Stan Kern and Landers combined for a 10-inning 1-0 victory.

Kern and Landers allowed five hits and Stofflet four. Landers came on relief of Kern to protect the one run lead in the last of the 10th.

The winning run for Canada came when Jim McMillan was hit by a pitched ball, was sacrificed to second and scored on a pinch-hit single by Harvey Stevenson.

The second win for Canada over the U.S. (and Stofflet) came three days later. This time Landers went all the way in the 2-1 victory. He allowed the U.S. four hits while Canada picked up five from Stofflet.

Again McMillan was a part of it. Playing in place of injured shortstop Bob Holness, McMillan tripled to score Norm Mcleod and Bob Burrows in the first inning with Canada's only runs.

Stofflet shut the door on Canada after that. He struck out 14.

Landers was in trouble all the way, but was tough in the clutch. He left eight runners stranded and struck out 10. U.S. got its run in the fifth on singles by Rennie Petre and Art Weida, Petre scoring on a forceout by Carl Walker.

Stofflet scored his one win over Canada in the playoff round. He shut out Canada on two hits in a 1-0 victory.

Stofflet struck out 12.

Landers and Kern pitched for Canada, the U.S. run coming on a homerun blast by Walker in the sixth off Landers. Landers allowed three hits. Kern pitched the seventh inning as Landers was lifted for a pinch hitter. It was Landers' first defeat of the tournament and Canada's second.

Canada topped the tournament qualifying round with an 11-1 record. The U.S. was 10-2. Canada's only defeat came at the hands of New Zealand.

Poor weather caused cancellation of the playoff round after the U.S. win over Canada and Canada, the U.S. and New Zealand were declared co-champions.

Sure, Stofflet is a fine pitcher, but let's get the facts straight. It's no disgrace to lose.

Landers and Kern didn't give away anything to him, when it counted most — in the world championships. And neither did the Canadian team (nee Victoria Bates).

Now did they? And shouldn't those facts be re-recorded?

Rangers keep Bosox hog-tied in Arlington

By The Associated Press

Texas Rangers always get their man . . . and their man always seems to be Boston Red Sox.

The Rangers made it nine in a row over the red-faced Red Sox in Arlington Stadium on Wednesday night when Richie Zisk singled Al Oliver home from second base in the 10th inning for a 3-2 American League baseball triumph. The Red Sox haven't won in Texas since September, 1977.

"I guess everybody knows we have lost nine in a row in Texas," sighed Boston manager Don Zimmer. "That's what happens when you don't get clutch hits and leave runners on base. We left six on base in the last five innings."

In other AL action, Kansas City Royals nipped Baltimore Orioles 2-1, New York Yankees downed Milwaukee Brewers 5-2 in 11 innings, California Angels edged Seattle Mariners 3-2, Oakland A's shaded Minnesota Twins 5-4, Detroit Tigers whipped Toronto Blue Jays 8-2 and Cleveland Indians beat Chicago White Sox 6-4.

Juan Beniquez and Bucky Dent hit sacrifice flies and Mickey Rivers added a run-scoring double in New York's three-run 11th inning. Play was interrupted for 32 minutes when 6-foot-4, 217-pound Cliff Johnson collided with plate umpire Lou DiMuro after scoring the second run of the inning.

DiMuro, who was conscious and responsive to questions, was taken by ambulance to a hospital for treatment of possible neck or back injuries. However, x-rays showed no damage, but he was kept in hospital for observation. X-rays also showed Johnson suffered nothing more than a bruised arm.

Meanwhile in the National League, Montreal Expos and Houston Astros continue to move up in the world.

After being down so long in their respective divisions, both teams are off and winging this season — lately taking the play away from the long-time powers.

The East Division-leading Expos continued to dominate Philadelphia Phillies, beating the defending champions 2-0 for the fifth time this season without a loss. The Astros whipped the Reds 6-3 for the second straight night and moved into a virtual tie with the West Division leaders, only four percentage points behind.

In the other NL games, Los Angeles Dodgers edged San Francisco Giants 6-5, San Diego Padres hammered Atlanta Braves 10-2, Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Chicago Cubs 9-2 and St. Louis Cardinals defeated New York Mets 7-3.

Legion juniors overcome early penalty problems

COQUITLAM — Most of the early penalties worked to Coquitlam's advantage but the scoreboard favored Esquimalt Legion when it counted, at the end of Wednesday's Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game.

Sparked by the five-point performance of Ed Van Dyk, Legion clipped cellar-dwelling Coquitlam 15-11 and moved into a share of second place with Richmond Roadrunners.

Legion led 4-3 after the first period but teams were tied 9-9 heading into the final frame.

All nine of Coquitlam's goals in the first two periods came on penalty situations. Coquitlam scored six while Esquimalt players were off and three while the host club was playing shorthanded.

Van Dyk scored twice and set up three to run his point total in four games to 35 points.

Tarey Pollock scored three times for Esquimalt while Bruce Alexander, captain Rhys Wickes and Paul Michael were two-goal performers. Wayne Reeve and Brian Bell added the singles.

Geordie Dean and Colin Broomfield both scored three for Coquitlam.

Golf pros go to work with new one-ball rule

And while most of the leading players on the Professional Golfers' Association tour believe the rule will not change their game, some predict it will bother others.

"It's going to raise hell with some guys," predicted Andy Bean, defending Kemper Open champion. "Some of them have down-wind balls, cross-wind balls, up-wind balls."

The rule, set by the United States Golf Association and followed by the PGA tour, requires a player to use only one brand and type of ball during a round.

Previously, players were allowed to use as many different brands and types as they desired, and many touring pros used different balls for long distances or low shots into the wind.

Although most of the leading players say they haven't used different balls, all have stories of players who do.

"At Sawgrass, you know how windy it was, I was hitting one-iron or three-wood to the par-3s, just nailing them to the front of the green," Ray Floyd said. "I looked at my playing partner and he hit a smooth four-iron to the middle of the green and I said, 'Well, excuse me."

Tom Watson said he might be responsible for the new rule.

Watson is not competing here this year, the last time the Kemper will be held in Charlotte before moving to Washington, D.C.

But Arnold Palmer, who is on hand, recalled the only time he switched balls, on a par-5 hole in a tournament in France.

"I was playing with (Spain's Seve) Ballesteros," Palmer said. "I got on in two. Ballesteros had no chance of reaching the green. He pitched on in three and made the putt for birdie. I three-putted for par. I decided right then I'd never change balls again."

Lions are literally fighting for spots

Times News Services

Tempers frayed at British Columbia Lions' training camp in Courtenay Wednesday as the 74 hopefuls literally began fighting for the 33 spots open on the Canadian Football League club's roster.

Veteran offensive lineman Tom Kudaba and rookie linebacker Mel McGowan were the combatants in the first fight of camp. The scrap was quickly broken up by the coaches.

All-star Glen Jackson, a non-import, appears to have one of the outside linebacker spots locked up, but four men are vying for the other spot with last year's incumbent Paul Giroday out for up to six weeks with a leg injury.

Two of the leading candidates for that spot are Ron Morehouse, a rookie who played his college ball at San Diego State, and Tom Schulz, a second-year pro from Simon Fraser University, who, the coaches say, has worked hard in the off-season.

Wide-receivers Al Charuk and Leon Bright and tight end Harry Holt missed Wednesday's workout with injuries.

ELSEWHERE, the big news came out of St. Catharines, where it was reported that Jimmy Edwards and Hamilton Tiger-Cats might be parting company . . . Hamilton coach John Payne announced Edwards would be traded or placed on waivers after the 26-year-old running back refused to practice . . . Edwards, the Canadian League's outstanding player in 1977 and rushing leader in the Eastern Conference for the last three years, claimed an injury to his left foot had not healed completely . . . But after examining Edwards, the team's doctors found no damage and declared him fit for practice, Payne said, adding: "I can't tolerate a player who isn't totally committed. As far as I'm concerned, he is no longer with us'' . . . Edwards said he wasn't complaining about pain in his foot, "only reporting that it tingled" . . . Edwards is in the second year of a six-year contract worth $1 million . . . If he is not traded to another CFL club, he can be claimed for the $350 waiver price . . . And in Toronto, the Argonauts announced the signing of veteran defensive end Jim Corrigall to a two-year contract.

Toronto centre calls it a day

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts announced that offensive centre Stewart Francis has retired from the Canadian Football League

The 29-year-old Simon Fraser University graduate, a seven-year veteran, said he's no longer interested in football.

Tight fight for cup

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) - By the width of a golf ball, the United States held on to its one point lead in the Walker Cup today after the morning foursomes finished with a victory for the U.S., one for the British and two matches halved.

Overnight, the U.S. led 6½-5½. Three-quarters of the way through the match, the scores are U.S. 8½, Britain 7½.

The eight remaining singles were scheduled this afternoon.

The final foursome of the morning, between U.S. youngsters Doug Clarke and Michael Peck and Britons Iain Carslaw and Allan Brodie was a thriller in the final stages. Up to the 15th hole the Americans had been in front all the time. Then on the 188-yard, par-3 16th Clarke hooked his tee shot. He and Peck took three shots to reach the green and were down in five to let the Britons square the match.

On the 17th, Clarke was bunkered with his drive and it took the Americans four shots to get out, giving the British pair the lead with one hole to play.

On the 18th it was the Britons' turn to blow up. After getting out of a bunker it took them four to reach the green and Carslaw, putting for a bogey-5 for a half and the match, saw his ball stop an inch short of the cup.

The other halved match was between Americans Marty West and Hal Sutton and Mike Kelley and Ian Hutcheon.

The most convincing win of the morning was the 4-and-2 victory by Jay Sigel and Scott Hoch against Britons Gordon Brand and Geoff Godwin.

Young players bidding to grab parks crowns

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Youth threatens to take over the sixth annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament.

No doubt, with a massive entry of 247 players — only eight short of last year's record of 255 — dark horses of both the male and female variety will come out of the list of unknowns and challenge for titles in the five events.

But right now, young players we have watched get better and better over the last two or three years look the hottest prospects we have.

Take the mixed doubles, one of two events with higher entries than ever before. Some 84 people — 42 couples — are involved in that event yet it's two of the youngest players in there who look hardest to beat.

Kerry Chan and Charlayne Joe, runners-up to Chris Barton and Janet Arnold (who cannot play this time as winners are unable to enter the same event again) in last year's final, are back in this summer and are early favorites.

Kerry, an impressive double runner-up who went home without a title last tourney, could find that this is his year. He just makes it by a month inside the under-18 boys' singles limit and could be tough to beat in that one, too.

But the boys' singles event with 41 entries looks like being quite a battle as three of last year's four semi-finalists — Kerry, Glenn Johnston and Richard Folk — plus impressive Steven Colwell are all back in again.

Joe Thompson, who beat Kerry in last year's junior final and therefore can't play in the boys' event this time, looks like being one of the top young contenders in the men's singles field, which with 118 starters is only 10 short of last summer's record 128.

Kerry and his brother Lorne Chan, plus flamboyant Perry Evans, boys' champ two years ago and a men's singles semi-finalist last time, also have good chances in the men's event.

The draw for first-round matches in all five events appears at the left. If you are unfamiliar with the way our tourney is run and find your name listed under BYES, it merely means you have to wait for others to play before you get into the action.

Postcards were mailed out today to one person of each pair drawn, informing them of their opponents' names and phone numbers. As this is the first round and there is a big entry, we are giving contestants until 5 p.m. on Monday, June 18, to have their games played and the result cards back into the Times newsroom. Deadlines will be much tighter between following rounds as we have a lot of matches to get through before our tourney windup weekend, Aug. 18 and 19 at Henderson Park.

Up to the semi-finals, matches are supposed to be of one pro set with the winners being the first to reach nine games. A tiebreaker is to be played at 8-8 if necessary to produce a 9-8 result.

So get a move on and play those matches as soon as possible and, if you want to see exactly where you are on the draw, you can plot your course to success by popping into Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora, where the sheets for all five events will be on display throughout the tourney.

Trophies will go to the winners and runners-up in all events and, for the first time this year, the winners will each receive a new tennis racquet, courtesy of Centre Court Racquets.

Weather is wrecking cup cricket schedule

BIRMINGHAM (Reuter) — Five World Cup cricket qualifying matches were abandoned because of rain Wednesday, four of them without a ball being bowled. All teams involved earned two points each.

The weather also threatened today's scheduled matches, including one between Canada and Denmark, the only teams in the 15-country competition with two victories.

The teams are playing for two places in the final round of World Cup play, joining Australia, England, India, New Zealand, Pakistan and the West Indies.

European Cup win a climax for Forest

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — In just two years, England's Nottingham Forest soccer team has gone from the second division to champions of Europe.

"When looking at the teams we eliminated on our way to the final you can see that we are a worthy successor to FC Liverpool," Brian Clough, Nottingham manager, said.

On Wednesday, Nottingham's Trevor Francis scored the team's only goal in a 1-0 victory over Malmoe FF of Sweden at Munich Olympic Stadium.

Clough said he expected his team to score more goals against Malmoe who was given only an outside chance of a victory.

"But I am truly satisfied with the one we scored," he added.

About 25,000 English fans among a crowd of 75,000 watched Francis head a right cross from John Roberston high under the bar just seconds from the end of the first half.

With close guarding and early tackling, Malmoe prevented Forest from utilizing its superior speed, and danger only flared when Robertson and Francis attacked on the wings.

Athletics, Vic West bid for B.C. cup final

There could be an all-Victoria final in the Province Cup soccer competition this year after Victoria Athletics and Victoria West travel to Vancouver Sunday for semi-final matches at Empire Stadium.

Athletics will meet Vancouver Croatia at 12:30 p.m. and Vic West will play New Westminster Blues at 2:30.

Winner of the Vic West-New Westminster game will be home team for the final.

A busload of fans will accompany the Victoria teams and Vancouver Island Soccer League president Doug Day says there still are some seats available. For anybody wishing to make the trip, the all-inclusive cost is $15. Further information may be obtained by calling Day at 477-1655.

West Bromwich outbids Leeds for young star

LONDON (AP) — English Division I soccer club West Bromwich Albion Wednesday signed Manchester City midfielder Gary Owen for $900,000.

West Bromwich beat out Leeds United, which made a bid earlier in the day, for Owen's signature.

Owen, at 21 one of England's most promising young players, was signed as a replacement for Len Cantello, who last week signed for Bolton. He played more than 100 games for Manchester City and has played nine times for England under-21.

Hector gets hat trick

Times News Services

Striker Kevin Hector scored all three Vancouver goals Wednesday night as the Whitecaps defeated Edmonton Drillers 3-1 in a North American Soccer League game before 10,529 spectators at Edmonton.

Hector's eighth goal of the season at 12:25 following a perfect cross from winger Willie Johnston gave the Whitecaps the early lead, but midfielder Hans Kraay beat Vancouver netminder Phil Parkes from short range at 27:30 to make it 1-1 at the half.

The game-winner came at 73:57 after Johnston again crossed the ball into the penalty area where Hector rammed an eight-yarder past Edmonton goalie Jan Endeman. Hector kicked in his third goal on a breakaway with less than four minutes to play.

Victory improved Vancouver's record to eight wins and two losses, atop the National Conference west division standings.

In another match Wednesday, Detroit Express got tangled in a trap.

"Against a team that plays the ball up to its forwards like Detroit does," said Dallas Tornado coach Al Miller, "we use an offside trap defence and it can be effective."

It was just that for the Tornado as they registered a 3-1 North American Soccer League victory over the Express, which was caught offside 11 times.

"It takes a lot of pressure off our defence," added Miller. "We practice it every day because we play against a lot of English-style teams.

Elsewhere in the NASL, New England blanked Los Angeles 1-0, Seattle topped Atlanta 3-1, California nipped Philadelphia 3-2, Tampa Bay edged Memphis 2-1, and Tulsa took San Diego 2-0.

New England ended a three-game losing streak and blanked Dutch star Johan Cruyff, who signed with the Aztecs last week. Keita, standing directly in front of the goal, took a pass from Artur and kicked it into the right corner for the only score.

Cosmos injury list like a who's who

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — What was once the best soccer team money could buy has become the best injured soccer team money could buy.

New York Cosmos' injury report reads like Marcus Welby's morning rounds.

"In all my years coaching, I've never seen so many injuries," coach Eddie Firmani said Wednesday. "All my players are on the table."

The Cosmos face Toronto Blizzard in a North American Soccer League game Sunday with most of their best players suffering from various ailments while defender Bobby Smith will miss the game sitting out a suspension.

Franz Beckenbauer, the most important Cosmo, underwent knee surgery last week and will be out at least two months; defender Werner Roth also went under the knife for a bad knee and is lost for the season; Seninho, the speedy left-winger, has a bruised knee that will keep him sidelined indefinitely; Eskandarian, a hard-tackling defender, has a fractured cheekbone and will be out four or five weeks while Vladislav Bogicevic is a doubtful starter with a knee sprain.

Had enough? That's only half of it.

Defender Wim Rijsbergen and forward Dennis Tueart both have Achilles tendon problems, making their availability a day-to-day situation; goalie Jack Brand has a bruised hip but says he can play Sunday; midfielder Ricky Davis practised Wednesday with a sore knee; forward Gary Etherington has a knee strain, sweeper Carlos Alberto a bruised foot and forwards Ron Atanasio and Boris Bandov both have hamstring pulls.

"We've had so many little strains and things, I can't believe it," Firmani said. "We miss Franz a lot. He's one of the best professionals, always in shape. You don't have to tell Franz to be on time or to train."

Most of the players and trainer Joel Rosenstein say a majority of the injuries come from playing on the Giants Stadium Astroturf.

Timely support helps Fletcher

The two-hit pitching of Bob Fletcher and some timely hitting by his teammates carried the youthful Juan de Fuca Builders to a 4-1 victory over Labatts in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action Wednesday.

Fletcher allowed only a run-scoring single by rival starter Larry Hall and a single by Joe Underwood in earning credit for the victory.

Builders made four of their six hits, including three triples, count. Pete Rumsby, Reg King and Mike Penner all scored after connecting for triples.

Home run power helped Remco Office Systems to a 6-1 victory over Jack Mears Realty in Heywood Men's League play. Right fielder Paul Baines got Remco started with a three-run homer in the first and Ken Geary added a solo shot in the sixth to back up Bob Richdale's five-hit pitching.

In Victoria Senior Women's League play at Hyacinth Park, Pirates blanked Dryco Breakers 4-0 and VI90 beat Esquimalt 8-2.

Sharon Ferrill had control problems but allowed only one hit in fashioning the shutout. Ferrill walked eight Breakers.

Yeta Delilla sparked VI90 with four hits, including a triple, and three runs-batted-in.

Mike Blades' homer highlighted Saints' 12-2 romp over Rebels while Doug Simmons' two-run clout carried James Bay Inn to a 3-2 win over Mayfair in Macdonald Park Men's League play.

New hurler wins debut

A recent arrival from Toronto, Howell checked in with a six-hit effort Wednesday and a 10-5 victory over Capital Radiators in his debut as a pitcher with Farmer Construction at Lambrick Park.

Howell also helped his own cause with a two-run double.

Smith, his catcher, was the big man at the plate with a single, double and home run as unbeaten Farmers ran their winnning strea to eight straight.

Haeberle leading harness drivers

Haeberle has three wins, four seconds and two thirds in 12 drives up to an including Monday, May 28, and is one slim percentage point ahead of Keith Linton who has a .489 mark.

The number of wins are multiplied by 9, the place by 5 and the show by 3. This total is then divided by the number of starts times 9.

Leaders of those qualifying for driving honors — to qualify, a driver must go to the post at least once a day — follow:

Colleges pinched for gov't funds

NANAIMO (CP) — At least half the colleges in British Columbia are cutting back on services because of inadequate government funding, says Dave Mitton, president of the College Faculties Federation of B.C.

Mitton, in a news release following the group's annual general meeting, says teachers at the colleges are extremely concerned about the spending cuts. They passed a resolution at the meeting earlier this week condemning the reductions.

"Cutbacks and severe restrictions will mean many colleges will be unable to provide services to the communities of college regions," Mitton says.

Architects seek competition

"We favor a competition among B.C. architects to get the best design as possible within a budget established by the civic, provincial and federal governments." said Ron Bain, president of the Architectural Institute of B.C. said.

The government so far has declined to say whether there would be any public input in the plans for the centre.

Doukhobors want probe

NELSON (CP) — A spokesman for an orthodox Doukhobor sect said Wednesday the group is disappointed that the attorney-general's office has decided not to set up an independent committee to study Doukhobor-related arson attempts in the West Kootenays.

The Union of Spiritual Communities of Christ had requested such a committee earlier this month.

Spokesman Jim Popoff said the sect will continue to lobby for the establishment of of a consultative committee similar to one created by the provincial government in 1951. That committee made several recommendations concerning Doukhobor affairs.

Hooker curb upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that a provincial court judge was correct in ordering 20 women charged with soliticing not to frequent certain areas of the city.

The order, a condition of bail set for the 20, prohibited the women from frequenting certain downtown streets from 8 p.m. to 5 a.m.

One of those charged, Danielle Dufour, 22, had appealed the condition, but Mr. Justice H. C. McKay ruled that the order was not not banishment from Vancouver, because there are many city streets left open to her.

Same year delivery

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two months after the event, news director Roy Jacques of radio station CKWX has received official word from the prime minister's office that Parliament was dissolved for a general election May 22.

Jacques said today he received a large manila envelope in the mail Tuesday. It carried 50 cents in postage.

Inside, he found a 25-page report — in French and English — dealing with a visit to Washington by Prime Minister Trudeau for talks with President Carter.

Also in the envelope was a five-page communique which began: "Good evening. A few hours ago I asked the governor-general to dissolve Parliament for a federal general election on Tuesday, May 22, and I look forward to the campaign that begins tomorrow. It will be decisive for our country . . . ."

It was dated March 26 — more than two months ago.

Border gunman convicted

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a 26-year-old California man on a murder charge in the fatal shooting of a United States customs officer at the Lynden, Wash., border crossing.

Artie Ray Baker, also known as Michael Joseph Arrington, was indicted Tuesday on charges of murder, assaulting and interfering with federal officers and illegal transportation of a firearm.

Uranium inquiry 'just PR move'

KELOWNA (CP) — The royal commission inquiry into uranium mining in British Columbia could prove to be little more than a "public relations move to placate the public," says John Moelaert, chairman of the local chapter of the Canadian Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility.

Moelaert told a news conference Wednesday the provincial government is not providing adequate funding for proper studies into the public health aspect of uranium exploration and mining.

He also charged that provincial and federal government agencies are deliberately withholding information on uranium exploration and its possible effects.

Moelaert said he has seen a copy of a memo from Wayne Green, head of the provincial radiation protection branch, requesting that results of a uranium water-quality study being carried out in B.C. not be released to the public.

Moelaert also produced a copy of the federal Atomic Energy Control Board operations directive which states that information obtained by the board for licensing and resource assessment should not be disclosed without the consent of the company applying for the licence.

"The incredible part of this is that information found by a public agency will not be released unless the mining companies say it can be," Moelaert said. "If there is anything damaging or alarming in it, it is unlikely a company will give its permission."

Disclosure of such information should be available to the public with no strings attached, he said.

"If the companies continue to explore and to keep the public in the dark as they are obviously doing it is going to undermine the effectiveness of the inquiry commission," he said.

"What do the uranium companies know that we don't?" he asked.

Socreds dead against N-power, says whip

Mussallem, the MLA for Dewdney, said in an interview Science Minister Pat McGeer likes the idea of nuclear energy because he is a scientist "and scientists love playing with expensive toys."

But Mussallem said he can't understand why Energy Minister Jim Hewitt would speak of possible nuclear power for B.C.

In Kamloops Tuesday, Environment Minister Rafe Mair, an opponent of the nuclear plant proposed for Sedro Wooley, Wash., 65 kilometres south of the Canadian border, said there is little the B.C. government can do to prevent its construction.

"I don't think the province has got the diplomatic power to do anything about it except raise its voice in protest," Mair said.

He said if MLAs agree, the provincial government could ask the federal external affairs department to register a protest against the development.

Also opposed to the plant is Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm whose Surrey riding lies close to the border.

U.S. regulatory authorities have not licensed the Sedro Wooley plant and there has been three-month moratorium on nuclear installations following last month's nuclear accident at Three Mile Island, Pa.

Midget sub company sinking in red ink

International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, builder of small, manned submarine-type crafts, is in receivership due to a world glut in the machines.

Vice-president David Doman says the only hope for survival is an entrepreneur willing to buy the company for long-term growth potential. The company's receiver thinks that unlikely with $3.5 million in debts.

The crafts, called submersibles, are used by various clients, including underwater researchers and offshore oil drilling companies.

Another British Columbia company in the same business is prospering in production of unmanned versions of the submersibles.

International Submarine Engineering Ltd. of Port Moody builds two versions of the crafts and is developing a prototype which can operate without a cable connected to a ship.

The unmanned versions are smaller and less costly than the manned submersibles, and can be used in conditions hazardous to crewed vessels.

Dangerous racket

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A 29-year-old man remained in fair condition in hospital Wednesday after being speared in the forehead by a fragment of a squash racket.

The racket apparently shattered as Ian McNay of New Westminster was serving the ball.

A spokesman for the YMCA said the accident was a "tragic fluke".

Nine convicted in cocaine

VANCOUVER (CP) — The longest cocaine conspiracy trial in British Columbia history ended in B.C. Supreme Court here Wednesday with the conviction of nine men and the acquittal of three others.

Twelve persons were charged with conspiracy to import cocaine following the seizure of 22 pounds of the drug, discovered by an Air Canada worker at Vancouver International Airport in April, 1978.

Richard Henry Bengert, 40, Frank Ferron, 42, Brian Robert Jeffries, 32, Steve Ponak, 49, and Paul Zamai, 45, all of Vancouver, will be sentenced July 3.

Also convicted were William Robertson of West Vancouver, John Edward Dupuis of Kamloops, B.C., George Layman, 29, and William Allan Perry, 35, of no fixed address.

Marwood Brown, 53, of Vancouver, Andrew McNaughton and Montford Berney, 28, of no fixed address, were acquitted.

Crown Prosecutor Howard Rubin had maintained throughout the 128-day trial that Zamai and Robertson were kingpins and the rest salesmen and runners.

Rubin said the main operations room for the ring was in the Alcazar Hotel here. He also said that more than 30 pounds of cocaine was smuggled into Vancouver in late 1976 alone.

At one point, nearly $500,000 worth of the drug sat in an unlicenced car in a North Vancouver parking lot while a deal for its distribution was worked out, Rubin said.

More than 200 witnesses testified at the trial, which began last October, including persons involved with the ring who were not charged and were given new identities by police.

Police from B.C., Alberta, Ontario, the United States and six South American countries participated in the investigation.

Police said between $2 million and $3 million was spent during the 18-month investigation and trial, mainly for travel and witness protection.

Duke's awards for 189

Activities as varied as canoeing and backpacking expeditions, lifesaving, running and service to the blind have earned for 189 young British Columbians the coveted Duke of Edinburgh Award.

The young recipients — including a large contingent of 99 from the Greater Victoria area — will receive their awards at Government House Saturday from Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving, chairman of the B.C. and Yukon Council of the awards program.

Among the Victoria-area winners are a group of 50 students from Spencer junior secondary school in Langford, 15 from Shoreline junior secondary and several members of Ranger companies, cadet corps and squadrons.

The awards program was devised by Prince Philip to encourage young people between the ages of 14 and 21 to make the best use of their leisure time, and to strive for character development through individual achievement.

Participants do not compete against each other. Each measures himself or herself against a set of internationally recognized standards for each section of the program.

Three categories of awards are available — bronze for participants over 14 years of age, silver for those over 15 and gold for those over 16.

In the awards program there is a world-wide participation of more than 200,000 in 47 countries. Canada's total of 14,000 participants includes more than 2,500 from B.C.

Moth victims bugged

VANCOUVER (UPC) — The two groups advocating different methods of killing an infestation of gypsy moths in this Vancouver suburb are becoming almost as pesky as the insects themselves.

Repeated "opinion surveys" by federal officials advocating spraying with the insecticide carbaryl, and counter-surveys by the Greenpeace Foundation, opposing it, have become a growing irritation.

Local feeling was summarized by a placard pinned to a barrier of plastic sheets which appeared outside one home Wednesday. It read: "I don't care who you are, or who you are with, or what you're doing — do what you have to do and leave me alone!"

A federal agriculture spokesman said Wednesday a final opinion survey will be conducted in the neighborhood this week to determine local feelings in the plan to spray infected trees with carbaryl.

THE ATLAS CELEBRATION SALE!
APRIL 23 - JUNE 2

Why we're celebrating.

Atlas Mark V vs the Big 3
The Atlas Radial Tire Test Report

If you have fixed ideas about tires, this 16 page booklet*, which is yours for the asking at any participating Esso Dealer, could change them. It contains a summary of the results of an extensive head to head competitive tire test called "Atlas vs The Big 3". And because in overall performance, the Atlas Mark V tested out to be number one, we decided to celebrate.

The Atlas Mark V steel belted radial was tested against the leading French, and the two leading North American premium quality steel belted radials.

The tests covered areas of performance most important to you - durability, traction, endurance, ride and handling characteristics.

And the Atlas Tire did very well indeed. In fact, the tests proved that in overall quality the Mark V tested out to be number one. The same rigid standards of quality and performance are built into every Atlas Tire we make - and that makes the Atlas Celebration Sale the place to buy your next set of tires. Atlas Tires, like all Atlas products, are guaranteed by Imperial Oil.

Pick up the booklet, it gives a summary of the test results, names the competition, and it's worth its weight in savings.

*The names of the competing tires in the advertisement, together with a summary of all the test results appear in the free 16 page booklet "Atlas vs The Big 3", available May 1st at participating Esso Dealers, or write "Atlas vs The Big 3", P.O. Box 2337, Oshawa, Ontario, L1H 7V6.

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The territorial government has banned the use of certain chemical sprays used to kill brush in the Northwest Territories until it has further proof the sprays are not damaging the environment.

Applying to sprays containing 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T acids, the ban followed opposition to use of the chemicals was raised by the Dene Nation and the Yellowknife branch of the Consumer's Association of Canada.

The Canadian Coast Guard had been using a chemical spray containing 2,4-D along the banks of the Mackenzie River.

The banned chemicals are suspected of causing cancer and birth defects when used in large amounts.

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 22-year-old Winnipeg man upset by a 10-speed bicycle he claims is unsafe has mounted a one-man protest in front of a downtown department store.

For more than a week, Reginald McNeil has stood outside the Hudson's Bay Co. store and says he won't rest or eat until the chain stops selling the bicycle. The protest has already cost him his job at a local paint factory.

A spokesman for The Bay, said the problem arose from a lock washer that was put on backwards, but insisted the bicycle is safe.

McNeil said a screw on the right brake handle of the bicycle loosens when the brake is used and the handle itself came off while he was riding the bike.

However, former Olympic cyclist Lindsay Gauld, owner of the company which assembles the bicycles for The Bay, refuted McNeil's argument.

The matter was raised in the Manitoba legislature, where Consumer Affairs Minister Warner Jorgenson said it would be looked into if McNeil filed a complaint with the provincial consumers bureau.

Judges busy counting in 3 close federal tilts

OTTAWA (UPC) — Judicial recounts are under way in three hotly-contested ridings and a fourth is awaiting the go-ahead following the May 22 general election.

Jack Forrester, a spokesman for the Chief Electoral Officer, said Wednesday federal judges are counting ballots in Vancouver Centre, the Toronto riding of Parkdale-High Park, and Halifax.

He said a request for a recount was also expected from the Nova Scotia riding of South Western Nova, where the Conservative candidate has a narrow lead over the Liberal incumbent.

The recounts might take as long as a week to conduct, depending on the judge involved.

In the Vancouver riding, Conservative Pat Carney edged Liberal Art Phillips, former Vancouver mayor, by two votes on election night. But a non-judicial recount gave the seat to Phillips by 100 votes.

Another judicial recount is under way following a recount in Parkdale-High Park, where Tory incumbent Yuri Shymko lost to Liberal Jesse Flis by 64 votes.

And in Halifax — a seat held for 11 years by former Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield — the final ballot count was contested by Brian Flemming, a Liberal lawyer and former aide to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

In Southwest Nova, Liberal incumbent Coline Campbell has yet to request a judicial recount after an official count placed Conservative Charles Haliburton in front by 109 votes.

Private firms in B.C. hike investment budgets

OTTAWA (CP) — A government survey of major corporations has turned up some good news for the British Columbia economy.

The regular April survey of 300 major corporations by the department of industry, trade and commerce found they will invest about $20.7 billion in new buildings and equipment in 1979, about $1 billion higher than estimated in a survey last October.

British Columbia and the Atlantic provinces were the two regions where capital spending budgets showed the greatest rise.

The department said this is the first time in four years that investment estimates had been revised upward between October and April surveys.

The new investment means there will be more jobs and greater capacity to produce the goods and services that contribute to the country's total wealth, indicating an improvement from sluggish growth of the last few years.

The corporations surveyed represent about two-thirds of non-agricultural investment, but small businesses are not included.

The department said the results of the survey suggest the actual increase in the level of real business spending — after inflation is discounted — will be 4 to 6 per cent for 1979. This compares with actual increases of less than one per cent since 1975.

The department said the increased investment is "not surprising" as many facilities now are operating at or close to capacity and companies have to expand to fill new orders.

Export markets are particularly healthy for Canadian companies because the lower value of the dollar has made Canadian goods cheaper and more competitive abroad.

Strong increases in profits in the last year were also labelled as a signficant factor influencing investment plans.

Manufacturers of transportation equipment, primary metals and food and beverages indicated the highest increases capital spending plans.

In non-manufacturing, mining, transportation and storage as well as trade, finance and other commercial sectors showed the strongest increases.

Oil and gas and communications companies were found to be weaker.

The survey also found:

— Nearly all the $1 billion increase in spending plans was in the private sector. Crown corporations had few revisions.

— There is a "relatively favorable" domestic investment climate in Canada this year.

—Foreign-owned firms show a higher rate of increase in capital spending in Canada than domestic-controlled firms.

— There has been a downward revision of capital spending plans for 1981-83 in the latest survey, indicating "there has been a tendency to bring plans forward from 1981-83 to the 1979-80 period."

Inuit seek to bar mines

The case being heard in federal court pits 113 Inuit residents of Baker Lake, N.W.T., against the federal government and several foreign and Canadian-owned mining companies.

The Inuit are seeking an injunction to prohibit the federal government from issuing mining permits across 70,000 square kilometres of land located 1,600 kilometres north of Winnipeg.

Dr. Elmer Harp, professor emeritus at Dartmouth University in New Hampshire, testified as an expert witness on archeology for more than five hours Wednesday, detailing various archeological sites he discovered near Baker Lake in 1958.

He said the Inuit were the first inhabitants of the North American Arctic, adding that evidence of the earliest Eskimo culture in the Baker Lake area dates back to about 1000 BC.

Tom Heintzman, counsel for Noranda Exploration and Urangesellschaft Canada Ltd., asked Harp whether he was aware that four other archeologists and anthropologists say Eskimos did not live in the interior year-round until sometime after the 1700s.

"That's what they're saying," Harp replied.

"Are you aware of any writings to the contrary?" Heintzman asked.

"No. Maybe I'll have to sit down and write it myself."

Aided dad in suicide, spared sentence

TORONTO (CP) — A young Chinese immigrant who became part of his father's suicide plot last fall was given a suspended sentence Wednesday by a judge who took into account the accused's "ethnic and cultural background."

Wai Kee Hui, 21, pleaded quilty to helping his father, Ka Kwan Hui, 53, kill himself last Oct. 31.

The judge was told that the elder Hui, an international trader, was deeply in debt and had decided to kill himself so his family could collect $164,000 in insurance.

Sergeant Jack Press of Metropolitan Toronto Police said the man tried to make it look like murder so his wife and four children could collect under a double-indemnity clause.

Judge Hugh Locke of county court was told Wai Kee Hui, a university student, stole a jar of potassium cyanide from a university laboratory last August. Two months later his father died after apparently stuffing a cyanide-soaked rag into his mouth on a parking lot in front of a hotel where the family was living.

Wai Kee Hui admitted getting the poison because "I never question my father."

$95 a week over 3 years rejected

TORONTO (CP) — Pressmen, platemakers and paperhandlers at The Globe and Mail rejected a tentative agreement Wednesday that included raises totalling $94.90 a week over three years for pressmen and platemakers and $79 for paperhandlers.

The old rate for the 31 pressmen and 10 platemakers was $392 a week, and for the eight paperhandlers, $333.50.

Quebec rejected May 22: Levesque

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday he will "beseech and implore" Quebecers to "take on the dignity and responsibilities of a people" and vote yes in the forthcoming referendum on the province's constitutional future.

Speaking during a debate on a motion by Liberal leader Claude Ryan calling on the government to take the lead in bringing about a renewed federalism in Canada, Levesque said Quebecers have a right to a separate existence as a people.

Levesque said the results of the May 22 federal election, which saw the Progressive Conservatives take power with only two MPs from Quebec, prove that English Canada has rejected Quebec.

Levesque said Quebecers and Canadians are two peoples and that "there must be between peoples the same relationship as between individuals, one based on equality."

"I'm confident that when the time comes, the leader of the Canadian government will find this democratic spirit, but first we will have to show desire for freedom and equality."

Cash crunch hits Wardair

EDMONTON (CP) — Wardair International Ltd., the small but active Edmonton-based charter airline, is in financial trouble.

That word came from company president Max Ward, who told a recent shareholders' meeting the Canadian transport commission must alter regulations to allow Wardair to carry a percentage of passengers on a straight non-charter, scheduled-service basis.

A hearing on Wardair's application is scheduled for July 9 and Ward warned that if the transport commission rejects the bid Wardair could go under by the end of the year.

The airline is also waiting for a decision on an earlier application for a licence to introduce advanced booking domestic charter-class service between major Canadian cities.

Air Canada, CP Air and a number of regional airlines, including the Alberta government's Pacific Western Airlines, already offer the bargain-basement fares known as ABCs with discounts of 50 per cent or more for major routes.

Ward said there would be no dividend from last year's operations. Although Wardair showed a net profit of more than $5.4 million, up from $3.8 million in 1977, a substantial part of the revenue came from the sale of the airline's two 10-year-old Boeing 707 aircraft and related equipment.

Thorne Riddell and Co., Wardair's auditors, said that if the planes had not been sold and certain tax write-offs not used, Wardair would have taken a net loss last year and the year before.

Ward's attitude towards government influence on the airline business was outlined in a speech he gave at the University of Alberta spring convocation Wednesday.

He warned graduates that in their excursions into business they would meet biased bureaucrats, out-dated policies and a general lack of interest on the government's part in spurring business development.

Wardair is actually two firms: the international charter service which operates four planes — two McDonnell-Douglas DC-10s and two Boeing 747s — and a northern service, based in Yellowknife, N.W.T., which has a fleet of small propeller-driven aircraft.

Barry Thomson, who sits on the transport commission, said in an interview Wednesday that the decision on Wardair's application for domestic charter-class fares is being written and should be handed down well before the end of the year.

Wardair had also recently asked that it be allowed to consolidate some charter flights as a cost-cutting move, meaning a flight would make stops in more than one Canadian city to pick up passengers before heading for its foreign destinations.

The commission recently allowed the change.

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Playing a kid on The Waltons series is like living in a goldfish bowl with plenty of detergent for the wholesome viewing audience.

One of those kids who has grown up in the public eye is Judy Norton-Taylor who plays Ma and Pa Walton's eldest daughter, Mary Ellen.

Since age 13 Judy has lived a double life. On the air she has been a pillar of decorum, a plain country girl who marries a doctor, has a baby and is widowed when her husband is killed during the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Off the air, Judy is very much a contemporary child of her times.

She left home at 16 to live with a man whom she married two years later. The marriage ended in divorce after a couple of years — a series of events that would shock the Waltons right off their mountain.

Today Judy is 25 and living with a Los Angeles deputy sheriff in her San Fernando Valley home.

"I let my boyfriend live with me because I'm a nice person," Judy said, smiling. "It's also nice to have a live-in bodyguard, especially in light of some of the weird things that have been happening to me.

"Last September I had an extortion threat. Some guy telephoned and threatened to bomb my car if I didn't pay him $20,000. He called back the next night and arranged a meeting. The police captured two men.

"My boyfriend keeps guns in the house now and I've learned to fire all of them for self-protection."

Judy is conscious of her public image as Mary Ellen and tries to keep a low profile. She is a bit weary of her role in the show but has no plans to quit as did Richard Thomas (John-Boy).

"It's not an easy matter to grow up in the public eye," Judy said. "It's tough enough handling the teen years in private without all the pressures of work and long hours on the set.

"I always resented having a guardian and the restrictions of going to school at the studio. They treat kid actors more like an object than persons.

"Also you have to be careful not to offend anyone in a family show like ours. Personal scandals are something to be avoided. But I'm not the kind of person who would get involved in trouble anyhow.

"The gossips linked me with all the male members of the cast, but we've never been anything but good friends. I was especially fond of Richard and hated to see him leave the series."

If Judy is discontented with The Waltons, why doesn't she pack up and head for bigger and better acting assignments?

She's thought about leaving, but stays with the show "for the security of having a steady job."

"But that doesn't mean I'm earning a fortune. People expect TV stars to be millionaires. I'm far from it. I signed the contract when I was 13, and you really don't know what you're doing at that age.

"I find it tedious playing the same character day in and day out. The dialogue and situations tend to become repetitive. You fall into a pattern instead of being creative.

"I'm tired of playing respectable Mary Ellen. It would be fun to do something else for a change. But our schedule is so difficult it's hard to work in other projects during hiatus.

"In the eight years of the series I've done only one other show, Valentine, a movie of the week with Mary Martin and Jack Albertson. I play a pregnant girl hitchhiker. It will be on the air next fall.

"I try different attitudes and approaches in The Waltons. Sometimes the director goes along and sometimes he doesn't. There's never enough time, doing an hour show in 6½ days, but you keep trying.

"Mary Ellen has to be played somewhat undramatically because she is patterned after a real person."

From flappers to Olympics on CBC!

TORONTO (CP) — Two Canadian comedy series — one about a Montreal nightclub owner in the 1920s and the other about four free-wheeling senior citizens — highlight CBC television's 1979-80 schedule announced Wednesday.

CBC's English network also announced plans for a weekly hour of science with David Suzuki, a series on cities of the world, the 1980 Winter and Summer Olympics and a new series of programs for children.

Flappers, a half-hour comedy, has Susan Roman playing the role of May Lamb, owner of a Montreal nightclub.

Nelly, Daniel, Emma and Ben, which will begin in mid-season, is a half-hour situation comedy about four senior citizens who leave the security of a home for the elderly in favor of striking out on their own.

MP arrests mar Rhodesia switch

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Eighty-eight years of white domination in Rhodesia comes to an end at midnight tonight when Bishop Abel Muzorewa's black-majority government takes over from Ian Smith, the outgoing white prime minister.

But shortly before the appointment of the bishop's 17-man cabinet Wednesday, police arrested several prominent officials of the only legal black opposition party to the new government.

Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole's faction of the Zimbabwe African National Union said eight of its officials had been arrested by police.

The arrests of the Sithole officials, including Deputy Secretary-General Tobias Chizengeni, were made while the party was still formally a member of the transitional government.

It is boycotting the coalition led by Bishop Muzorewa because it says his election victory was rigged.

Informed sources said they believed alleged criminal and not political offences were involved.

But Sithole spokesman James Dzvova said: "We regard it as a political move by the incoming administration to harass our supporters. We think it will be counter-productive, especially overseas. It is a sad start to the new administration."

Another shock for Rhodesians was the announcement of a 20-per-cent increase in the price of petroleum, already strictly rationed.

Ministers said it will have a marked effect on the cost of living and the balance of payments.

From midnight, the country's name will be changed to Zimbabwe-Rhodesia.

The new government will base its case for international recognition and support in its war with Patriotic Front guerrillas on claims that it is a democratic regime supported by the majority of Rhodesia's seven million blacks and 230,000 whites.

The gasoline price rise brought home to Rhodesians their dependence on South Africa in a war which is costing at least $1 million a day.

The government blamed the increase on higher procurement costs.

Rhodesians now will have to pay about $3.20 a gallon for gasoline.

OWLS HEAD, Maine (UPI) — A twin-engine commuter plane apparently lost in a pea-soup fog crashed in a rocky coastal area of Maine late Wednesday night, killing 17 people. A 16-year-old youth thrown from the plane was the only survivor.

As rescuers stumbled through the wreckage early today, top state police officers called it the worst air crash in Maine's history. Efforts to locate the bodies were hampered by the fog and hundreds of spectators from the popular tourist area.

"I don't believe we'll find anyone else," said state Public Safety Commissioner Arthur Stilphen.

A Penobscot Bay Medical Center spokesman said John McCaffrey, a teen-ager from Searsmont, Maine, was conscious and in stable condition after undergoing surgery this morning.

He was the sole survivor of Downeast Airlines Flight 46, which plummeted into the woods a kilometre off the end of the Knox County Airport.

So switch to HAMburger!

TORONTO (CP) — Go ahead — make a pig of yourself on pork!

Prices will probably come down soon and stay down for the next year.

Farmers, who were getting $62.66 per hundredweight in early May, could be getting as little as $52 to $54 by fall because of what the Ontario Pork Producers' Marketing Board calls "one of the biggest hog-building booms in history.

"It's really good news for the consumer for at least a year," board chairman Howard Malcolm said Wednesday.

"There'll be plenty of pork at a low price to replace high-priced beef, and a quality that's steadily improving as we learn how to produce leaner and leaner pork."

At the same time, the board is urging hog farmers to rethink any plans they may have for expanding production and contributing to a further drop in prices.

"We're really concerned about the flood of pork that may hit the market a year from now because of decisions farmers are making at the moment," Malcolm said.

He said hog farmers have been doing well for the past four years but this fall could be disasterous for them if prices drop to below $52 per hundredweight.

Consumer prices probably will rise slightly this summer, depending on how many people decide to barbecue pork chops instead of steak, but later will drop steadily for at least a year.

In Toronto supermarkets last week, centre cut pork loin roasts sold for $1.88 to $1.99, compared to $1.78 to $2.12 in January.

To recognize fresh fish, look at the eyes: the shinier, the fresher. Dull, glazed or sunken eyes mean a fish has been out of water for too long.

Food & nutrition

New Hero a French loafer but linked to English earl

The New Hero, sparked with sauerkraut, mustard and yogurt

The Earl of Sandwich would certainly be amazed at the interesting variety of sandwiches enjoyed today. They come in all sizes and shapes and include a wide range of ingredients. It is quite a change from the cold beef and bread combo which was named after the Earl.

One of the liveliest sandwiches to come on the scene is the colorful "New Hero." This super-sized sandwich is made with a whole loaf of French bread. In between are layers of meats, cheese, pickles and crisp greens. For the crowning touch, a zingy topping of sauerkraut, mustard and yogurt is added.

What a treat for the appetite! Especially when it is served at a party or an after-swim gathering. As the warm weather approaches, the sandwich can be ready in an instant for a picnic or casual supper.

The tangy flavor of sauerkraut is not new to the sandwich world. The famous Reuben is a grilled "corned-beef-on-rye" sandwich embellished with sauerkraut and Swiss cheese. Even the ever-popular hot dog is frequently garnished with a dollop of steaming sauerkraut.

When you open a jar of sauerkraut to make the New Hero Sandwich, why not use the leftovers to experiment with your own sandwich creation. Fillings such as ham, bacon and bologna are complemented by the refreshing tanginess of the sauerkraut.

NEW HERO SANDWICH

2 cups well-drained sauerkraut
½ cup yogurt
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 loaf (15-inch) French bread, butter or margarine
Fresh Spinach
4 thin slices onion
6 ounces sliced salami
3 large rectangular slices Swiss cheese, halved
3 dill pickles, thinly sliced
3 ounces smoked, sliced pastrami
1 medium tomato, thinly sliced

Mix kraut with yogurt and mustard. Halve French bread, lengthwise, and spread with butter or margarine. On bottom half of bread, layer spinach leaves, onion, salami, Swiss cheese, dill pickles, pastrami and tomato. Top with kraut mixture and cover with top layer of bread. Secure with picks. To serve, slice diagonally in 1-inch thick slices, serving 2 per person.

VARIATIONS: Use ¼-pound sliced liverwurst in place of salami and sweet cucumber chips in place of dill pickles.

Italian bread may be used in place of French bread. To serve, slice loaf diagonally to make 6 to 8 servings.

In place of Italian or French bread, layer in pocket bread and slice in halves or wedges to serve.

Another time, layer half of filling mixture on each side of French or Italian bread and top with crisp alfalfa sprouts. Cut diagonally and serve "open-face" style.

Mayonnaise may be used in place of yogurt.

Dodds
wild strawberry extract

Spring and Summer bring changes in our daily routines—from weekend outings to different foods to—stomach upsets. For many years, wild strawberry extracts have been a trusted standby for the resulting miseries of intestinal cramps and diarrhea. But why did they have to taste so terrible? The folks at Dodds have formulated a new milder tasting wild strawberry extract. It still tastes like medicine but you no longer have to wonder whether the cure is worse than the complaint. Soothing, non-constipating Dodds Wild Strawberry Extract works effectively for your children too. Be prepared for the Summer... Get some now and have help on hand always.

Have you noticed how many creative hostesses always manage to serve unique appetizer dishes when entertaining? Well, here's a favourite of mine... it's called CHEESE-CUCUMBER DIP. 8-oz pkg cream cheese (room temperature); ¼ cup finely shredded, drained, unpeeled cucumber; ¼ tsp Worcestershire sauce; 1 tsp finely chopped onion, or to taste, (optional); Dash of garlic salt. Combine all ingredients. Use as a dip for potato chips or crudites, or chill and use as a spread for crackers.

I'd like to tell you about my latest skin discovery... an antiseptic cleansing lotion for the skin called Ten-O-Six Lotion by Bonne Bell. If you, or anyone in your family, have problems with pimples, blemishes or blackheads I urge you to try Ten-O-Six Lotion today. This product will help you achieve a clean, clear, healthy looking complexion. It has always been my belief that if a product has been on the market for over 50 years (as is the case with Ten-O-Six Lotion) it must be a good one... and by the way, the people at Bonne Bell are having a Spring sale featuring 50% off the regular selling price on the gallon size Ten-O-Six Lotion and ⅓ off the 480 ml. bottle. So look for Ten-O-Six Lotion at leading drug and department stores... and confidentially speaking, you'll be glad you did.

Fat teenagers: Get them moving

Food for Thought

By Dr. Jean Mayer and
Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Remember the stereotype of the jolly, carefree fat person — as light on his feet as Mr. Pickwick at the Christmas ball, always affable and at ease with the world? There's always an exception to every rule.

But show us a fat teenager who is unfailingly cheerful, and 999 times out of a thousand, we'll show you someone who is putting up a brave front to hide a real hurt.

Today's overweight teenagers — girls in particular — are under tremendous social pressure. Everyone around us, on television, in the movies, in the fashion world, even (and with very good reason) the medical establishment, tell us to think thin.

In addition, even those individuals who understand the unhappiness of fat people still look on them with some degree of contempt, believing the equally false myth that overweight is simply the result of overeating. For teenagers, who are at a period in their life when popularity is practically a social obligation, this can be devastating.

Some years ago, Dr. Mayer conducted a number of studies with obese and normal-weight teenagers. Included in one of the studies was a psychological questionnaire as part of a series of tests given to a group of girls at two summer camps — one an ordinary camp, the other a special camp for obese girls. The results were startling.

Overweight girls generally were found to withdraw, not only from other teenagers but also from their own families (even though they also are more dependent on them than girls of normal weight).

Another study, comparing the academic records of high-school seniors and college students, showed that being fat cut a girl's chances of college admission by one-half, a boy's by one-third. Grades, IQs, aptitude test scores, health records, were essentially the same. The only difference was in weights.

We suspect there are two reasons for this. One is the unconsciuos attitude of some teachers, principals, and admissions officers toward obese young people. Subconsciously, they may feel that the overweight girl or boy does not match their image of a student at a prestige college. Conversely, students who have a low self-image and general feeling of rejection, may become convinced that they couldn't get in college in any case, so why try?

All this simply emphasizes the fact that extra pounds are a serious problem for teenagers. Happily, however, a number of things can be done about it.

First, particularly with boys, the possibility is strong that what is overweight is what we call "puppy fat." And within a short time, "Mr. five-by-five" may shoot up to "Mr. six-by-three," and the problem is over.

Second, fad diets or fasting is certainly not the answer. Everyone needs a balanced diet, and teenagers need a balanced diet even more than older people. Otherwise, they may fail to reach their full height, leaving them more stocky and dumpy than they need to be.

There is a special risk in unbalanced diets for young girls, whose need for iron increases substantially when they begin menstruating. One good source of iron is enriched bread, which is one of the first foods many dieters shun; the best of all is liver—if you can persuade them to eat it.

Studies show that, in contrast to overweight adults, overweight teenagers really eat no more — indeed, sometimes less — than their normal-weight peers. But what they don't realize is that they also move a great deal less. They not only overestimate the amount of food they eat, but overestimate how active they are. As a result, the most important single things to be done for overweight young people is to GET THEM MOVING.

So, by all means, teach teenagers good eating habits — show them by example. But, most urgent, encourage exercise. One of the best ways is to do it with them. Hike, swim, play ball, bike together. This is the ideal time of the year to begin.

'Harmless' food can kill

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Anyone using old-fashioned natural foods and folk remedies without having the old-fashioned wisdom to go with them may be doing more harm than good.

Botany expert Dr. Walter Lewis keeps close track of accidental poisonings and deaths caused by abuse of seemingly harmless products found in many health food stores. Such accidents were rare for a long time, he said, but they are growing at an alarming rate.

"As we moved into the 20th century and put our health into a doctor's care, we got away from the tradition of self-medication," Lewis said in his office at Washington University. "Suddenly in the last decade we're moving back."

Surrounded by specimens of harmful and beneficial plants, Lewis leafed through data on one particular plant, noting that one fatality was reported in 1913 and the next did not come until 1978.

"We've got a gap of two generations in which these practices were lost, maybe for good reason. There's a re-emphasis on herbal medicine. It's not scientific, but it's perpetuating information that is not in any way documented."

Lewis discussed a long list of harmful effects from apparently harmless plants, including:

—Chamomile tea, which he said can cause severe reactions in people allergic to ragweed pollen.

—The root, stems and leaves of the poke plant, all of which can be fatal.

—Licorice, either the root or the candy, which should be avoided by people suffering from high blood pressure.

—Pennyroyal oil, designed for external use but reputed to be a means of abortion. Recent deaths have been reported in the cases of women who took just one teaspoon of it internally.

"If you take a teaspoon of anything and it can kill you, it's poisonous," Lewis said. "It shouldn't belong in a health food store, but the tie-in is that it's supposedly an old herbal recipe."

Babies' nails clipped for safety

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nurse Nancy Rees says short nails on infants represent an eye safety factor. "Babies are famous for making sudden movements — and any eye scratch should have a pediatrician's immediate attention." The nurse also advises shading babies' eyes from direct sunlight, using soft lights in the nursery and preventing their getting too close to television sets.

60-minute gourmet

Shrimp-full shrimp for stuffing lovers

Most people have a special liking for foods that are "stuffed." It might be roast turkey, a breast of veal, peppers, onions, zucchini, clams, mussels, lobsters or oysters.

After all, oysters Rockefeller are in a sense "stuffed" with a spinach filling. The reasons are as numerous as they are obvious.

A "filling," "stuffing," "dressing," or "farce," — call it what you will — offers an appealing contrast both in flavors and textures. And almost anything within reason can go into a well-made filling, from ground or chopped leftover meats and vegetables to whole sausages (one of the most interesting "stuffed" foods I've ever sampled was cooked by a Cuban acquaintance, a roast loin of pork stuffed with chorizos, a fleshy garlic sausage).

The cooking time for stuffed foods can vary from what amounts to seconds to an hour and longer. If cooking time is a factor, raw shrimp is an excellent foil for a well-seasoned stuffing. In the recipe below, the cleaned shrimp are "butterflied," that is, split part way down and flattened lightly.

An excellent accompanient for the shrimp are cherry tomatoes bordelaise and these, too, must be cooked quickly for obvious reasons — when tomatoes are overcooked, their skins burst.

Crevettes Farcies
(Shrimp-stuffed shrimp)

22 to 32 medium-to-large-size shrimp, about 1¼ pounds.
4 large mushrooms, slightly less than ¼ pound.
5 tablespoons butter.
⅔ cup finely chopped onion.
⅔ cup finely chopped celery.
½ teaspoon finely minced garlic.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
¾ cup plus 1 tablespoon fine, fresh bread crumbs.
1 egg, lightly beaten.

1. Preheat the broiler.

2. Peel and devein the shrimp or buy them already prepared. Set aside 16 large or 24 medium-size shrimp for stuffing. Chop the remaining shrimp coarsely. There should be about half a cup. Set aside.

3. Slice and finely chop the mushrooms. There should be about one cup. Set aside.

4. Heat two tablespoons butter in a saucepan and add the onion, celery and garlic. Cook, stirring, until wilted and add the mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste. Stir. Cook about three minutes.

5. Remove the saucepan from the heat and add the chopped shrimp. Stir. Add three quarters cup of the bread crumbs, the parsley and egg. Stir to blend. Add salt and pepper to taste.

6. Butterfly the remaining shrimp: split them down the back almost but not all the way through. Open the shrimp, split-side down, on a flat surface.

7. Spoon equal portions of the mushroom and shrimp mixture on top of each shrimp as "stuffing."

8. Grease a baking dish large enough to hold the shrimp in one layer. Use one tablespoon of the remaining butter for this. Arrange the shrimp over the dish.

9. Sprinkle the shrimp with the remaining tablespoon bread crumbs and dot with the remaining two tablespoons butter. Place the baking dish on top of the stove and bring the juices around the shrimp to the boil and heat thoroughly (the butter will melt).

10. Place the shrimp under the broiler about five inches from the source of heat. Broil about five minutes or until shrimp are heated throughout and the "stuffing" is nicely browned.

Yield: 4 servings.

Tomatoes Bordelaise
(Tomatoes sauteed with shallots)

1 quart ripe but firm cherry tomatoes.
2 tablespoons butter.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots.
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.

1. Pick over the tomatoes and discard stems. Rinse and drain.

2. Heat the butter in a large skillet and when it is quite hot not brown, add the tomatoes, salt and pepper. Cook, shaking the skillet so that the tomatoes cook evenly.

3. Cook about two minutes. They should just be heated through. If they are overcooked, they will collapse. Add the shallots and parsley and cook, shaking the skillet, about 15 seconds.

Yield: 4 servings.

Old-fashioned roughage still vital for good health

By MARIAN BURROS
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "A whole wheat doughnut, I suppose, is better than what we have, but it still has too much sugar and too much fat," said the doctor most responsible for North America's fibre craze as he munched on a glazed doughnut and sipped his instant coffee sweetened with saccharin.

Earlier, Dr. Denis Burkitt had been regaling a notoriously straitlaced audience with scatological tales about his research in Third World countries and theories about the relationship between dietary fibre — what grandma used to call roughage — and the diseases of the Western world.

He told scientists at the Department of Agriculture symposia on human nutrition last week that the most important thing they could do is "get cereal fibre back in the diet. It would," he said, "be the end of the laxative industry."

The Scottish-born Burkitt, associated with the Medical Research Council in London, pulls no punches. And no one sleeps in the darkened auditorium as he lectures with slides that are as direct as his speech: "Disease depends on the relationship between causative factors and protective factors. I am suggesting that fibre may be protective."

Then he lists nine diseases or abnormal states which may be related to the lack of fibre in the diet: coronary artery disease, diverticultitis, appendicitis, cancer of the bowel and colon, hiatus hernia, varicose veins and hemorrhoids, diabetes, obesity and constipation. The last, almost all scientists agree, is definitely attributable to low-fibre diet and according to several there is evidence linking diabetes to lack of fibre. Evidence about the others is still hypothetical and not everyone is as convinced as Burkitt.

The Institute of Food Technologists says "any generalized statements about the use of dietary fibre as a drug to cure specific diseases should be looked at with reservations. . . the feeling of urgency about fibre in nutrition should not. . . cause the public to make drastic changes in their diets. . ."

But that hasn't prevented a number of people from capitalizing on the fibre fad in self-help books and cookbooks. fibre or bulk — the indigestible part of foods — is needed for satisfactory peristalsis, the wave-like contractions that send intestinal contents on their way.

Sales of bran cereals have risen about 20 per cent each year since 1975 and now account for about 15 per cent of the ready-to-eat cereal market. The sale of whole-grain breads is up. Cookbooks featuring high-fibre recipes were temporarily outpacing even low-cholesterol cookbooks.

According to Burkitt, Americans should consume 1 1-2 ounces of bran per day.

What that works out to, says Dr. Peter Van Soest, professor of animal nutrition at Cornell University, is: over 2 ounces of All Bran cereal; 5 1-2 ounces of Wheaties; 6 1-2 ounces of Grape Nuts; or over 9 1-2 ounces of Cheerios. In vegetable terms, it means: more than a pound of potoatoes in their skins, 2 pounds of green beans; over 4 pounds of peeled potatoes, cauliflower, or carrots; over 5 pounds of Romaine lettuce; or over 6 pounds of celery.

Burkitt is pleased with the number of breakfast cereals featuring bran that have been marketed in the last two years. He says he asked McDonald's to make a whole-wheat hamburger bun, and that "they weren't interested." But he is ambivalent about the current fibre fad and some of its promoters, like Dr. David Reuben, best-known as the author of Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex and Were Afraid To Ask, who later wrote another very popular Everything book about fibre.

It is estimated that Americans eat only about one-fifth as much fibre as their ancestors did before the rolling mill supplanted the stone-grinding mill around 1970.

Burkitt would like to see affluent nations "retrace our footsteps to 1870 and eat a diet rich in complex carbohydrates," adding fibre to the modern diet, high in refined sugars and refined grains and high in fat, is a compromise.

"You have to marry idealism with reality. Scientific work remains sterile until it is applied." Burkitt said, as he took another bite of his doughnut and noted that he eats everything put before him.

"The kind of attitude which really annoys me is the scientists and doctors who say, 'I wouldn't dream of making any recommendations without controlled scientific experiments.' That is total rubbish. This idea that we do nothing until the case is proved is totally immoral."

Despite his strong language, many of Burkitt's peers admire his style. The Chairman of USDA's Nutrition Institute, Dr. Walter Mertz, said that "even if he overstates his case a little, what he says makes sense."

What he was saying at the conference was what others were saying in different ways: In all probability, many Americans are eating themselves to death. Eating habits should be changed to follow a diet similar to that recommended by the Senate Nutrition Committee's Dietary Goals for the United States — reduction in consumption of fat, sugar and salt, coupled with inceased consumption of complex carbohydrates, whole grains, fruits and vegetables.

"Fat and fibre are reciprocally related," Burkitt said. "As fat consumption rises, carbohydrates fall." He was specific about what complex carbohydrates should be eaten. "The last way to get fibre is through salad. The United States is the largest salad-eating nation, yet it's the most constipated," Burkitt told his audience. "fibre intake has fallen in the last 200 years and more recently cereal fibre has been replaced by vegetable fibre.

Van Soest, one of the leading authorities on dietary fibre, has developed a well-accepted method for measuring dietary fibre. In studies conducted at Cornell, Van Soest has discovered that the transition rate is affected not only by the kind of fibre but by the size of the particles. "Coarse grade of wheat bran is the most effective. We took the same bran and made it flour size and it lost its ability to do the same thing."

"The amount of stool you pass," Burkitt said, "is a better indicator of the kind of heath and life you will lead than your plasma cholesterol level. Whatever causes colon cancer," he explains, "it would be less dangerous if diluted and if it was swept out of the bowel in 12 hours instead of a week. If people would eat one heaping tablespoon of miller's bran, they would be way ahead."

Dr. Guy Newell, deputy director of the National Cancer Institute, says there is "no known direct cause-and-effect relationship" between dietary fibre intake and colon cancer. But he said there is "early suggestive data" and "generalized increase in dietary fibre has no known disadvantages for almost all normal individuals."

Burkitt said it's ridiculous to "take out vitamins, minerals and fibre from food," and even more ridiculous that "your FDA won't allow you to add anything in food."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Maybe I'm too sentimental, overly sensitive, or just plain petty, but I have to get this off my chest!

For all the years before my daughter was married, on Mother's Day she'd remember me with a lovely card to which she'd add a sweet personal message. Now that she's married, she still sends me Mother's Day cards, but they are always "TO GRANDMA," from Little Julie, Jack and Jim."

Now, Abby, I adore my grandchildren, but I am not their mother! Although my daughter buys, signs, and sends those cards "to Grandma," they are not an adequate substitute for a Mother's Day card from her. It would mean so much if she would scribble a little message, saying, "Mom, I love you. Have a Nice day . . ." of something like that.

I hope you publish my letter because my daughter never misses your column. There! I feel better already. Thanks, Abby.

ME

DEAR ME: Mission accomplished.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: We live in a first-class highrise and pay high rent. We walk as lightly as possible so we don't disturb the tenants below us. We keep the volume on our TV low after 10 p.m., and ask our guests to keep the noise down out of consideration for our neighbors.

Last month a young couple moved in above us, and I've never heard such noisy people! And what sounds like stereo music goes continually — and very loud.

I complained to the manager, and she suggested I speak to them, so I went up and asked in a VERY nice way if they could be a little more quiet. They slammed the door in my face!

Since then, out of spite, they've been noisier than ever. I complained to the manager again. She said she was sorry but there was nothing she could do.

Our nerves are shot. We're not old grouches. We are reasonable people. What should we do? We have another two years to go on our lease.

—NOWHERE TO TURN

DEAR NOWHERE: Assuming the apartment manager is not the owner, appeal to the owner of the building. If that doesn't bring results, hunt up another apartment. And about that lease — hunt up a lawyer.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have a divorced daughter who has been living with her lover. She's 35 and self-supporting, so I can't tell her how to live. However, I am deeply concerned over the fact that my three grandchildren (three, five and seven) who live with their mother, are very much aware of the situation since they frequently crawl into bed with them!

I know that this sort of thing is not uncommon these days, but I feel that the children will be very much confused as to what is the right way to live when the time comes to tell tham about life, sex, etc.

How can a mother tell her 12- or 13-year-old daughter that this is wrong, when she is doing it?

CONCERNED PARENT

DEAR PARENT: Obviously your daughter doesn't consider her lifestyle "wrong," or she wouldn't openly practise it in the presence of her children.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL to "ANYONE FOR WHOM IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE:" The gestation period of a mother's advice is anywhere from one week to 50 years. Losing one's mother before having thanked her for the many precious things she taught you is one of life's greatest tragedies.

Dramatic new acne drug

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Adolescents and their parents, too, are rightfully excited about a new and dramatic treatment for acne. A synthetic vitamin A substance, known as "retinoic acid," shows great promise in clearing up resistant cases of acne.

A study, still under way at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., showed remarkable improvement in a fair-sized number of patients when this substance was used. Of the 33 patients with intractable acne who were treated with retinoic acid, all but one improved markedly. This represents a 94 per cent improvement, which is an extraordinarily good result for a study that is as yet incomplete.

Very few side effects were noted in the group that was studied. Mild dryness of the skin and of the lining of the nose occurred in some instances. This, however, was easily controlled with simple creams and other medications. The only warning against its use seems to be in relation to pregnancy.

Serendipity is a charming concept based on the story of the three princes of Serendip. Serendip is the island of Ceylon, now known as Sri Lanka. The basic thrust of the story was related to the fact that the princes, walking along the beach seeking shells, would find, by chance an article that had been lost before and which they were not looking for at the time.

Scientific serendipity describes any interesting find made by chance in the course of research, and totally independent of the problem that was being worked on. Finding penicillin, certainly one of the greatest boons to mankind, occurred while Alexander Fleming was studying an unrelated condition.

Know, enjoy your onions

Onion prices are still reasonable, so take advantage of them while you can. Look for well-shaped, firm and dry onions with a shiny, crackly skin with no evidence of sprouting. They should be clearly marked Canada No. 1 grade.

Onions add flavor to countless dishes — salads, soups, casseroles, omelets and stuffings. Yet, we often forget to serve onions alone, as a vegetable. Baked, boiled, steamed or fried they can compete with any other vegetable for flavor and eye appeal. Plan on using eight to ten medium onions to serve six.

BUTTER CRUMB CREAMED ONIONS

8 to 10 medium onions, peeled (about 1½-lbs)
1 cup chicken bouillon
¾ cup liquid from onions
2 tbsps butter
2 tbsps flour
Dash salt
Dash nutmeg
½ cup milk
2 tbsps melted butter
¼ cup dry bread crumbs

Cut onions in half. Cook in chicken bouillon for 10 minutes. Drain; reserve ¾ cup liquid. Melt two tablespoons butter. Blend in flour, salt and nutmeg. Gradually add cooking liquid and milk. Stir and cook until smooth and thick.

Arrange onions in baking dish and pour sauce over top. Combine two tablespoons melted butter with bread crumbs. Sprinkle over creamed onions. Bake 10 minutes at 375°F. Six servings.

By WILLIAM RICE
The Washington Post

I like rice. That has helped over the years as people with senses of humor more suited to noodles have chuckled as they serve "rice to Rice." Editor and Publisher magazine once printed a one-sentence joke to the effect that someone named Rice was covering the Food Editors Conference. A real thigh-slapper.

I'm weak on my family genealogy, but to the best of my knowledge I have no Chinese ancestors, no Uncle Ben, nor has anyone in my family been a rice farmer.

In my kitchen rice has no special status. I use it when I don't use potatoes or pasta, although sometimes at least two of this lovable starch trio do appear at the same meal. (Calories aside, I'd be happy to eat all three.)

As much and maybe even more than the other starches, rice's enduring charm lies in its versatility. Rice as risotto, with meat, fish or chicken in a casserole, served hot in a soup or cold in a salad, mixed with sugar and eggs to fashion a dessert. You don't eat it all, so the next day, or the next after that, you make fried rice.

Cooking rice is as simple as buying it, though countless stubborn cooks continue to try to prove the opposite. The directions on the package of supermarket rice do work. The French like to saute some onion in butter, stir in the rice, then add twice as much liquid (stock, preferably) and a bit of nutmeg. Stir once, cover the pan and allow 20 minutes at a simmer. Holes will appear in the top crust of the rice when it is cooked.

Another option is to bring 2 quarts of water to a boil, add salt and then a cup of rice, slowly to maintain the boil. Stir and boil uncovered for 12 to 14 minutes. Test a few grains by crushing or biting into them. When tender, drain in a seive or colander. Cover with cheesecloth. Add some water to the pan, bring it to a boil and place the sieve over the water. Steam over low heat until the rice is fluffy or until it is needed.

Perhaps the most delicious way to prepare rice that I know is the Persian method for making chelo. That and a handful of other recipes using rice follow.

JAMES BEARD'S CHELO
(Persian Rice)

(8 to 10 servings)

2 cups long grain rice, preferably basmati
Salt
1 stick (4 ounces) clarified butter, plus ½ stick, melted

If using basmati rice, wash it in hot water, then soak it in salted water for several hours. This is not necessary with converted rice.

Heat 2½ quarts of water to boiling, then add 1½ tablespoons salt and the rice. Boil for 10 minutes, then drain rice. Rinse with boiling water and drain well.

Choose a heavy pot with a tightly fitting cover. Place a folded tea towel on the bottom side of the cover and tie it in place with another towel fitted over the top. (The towel will absorb steam from the rice as it cooks.) Melt 1 stick of butter in the bottom of the pot. Add the rice, then pour the ½ cup melted butter over the rice. Place the lid on the pot and cook over low heat for 15 to 20 minutes. There should be a crusty layer at the bottom. Remove it separately and place some atop each portion of rice as a garnish.

Note: Olive oil may be used in place of butter.

RICE STUFFING FOR SMALL BIRDS

(Makes about 1½ cups)

½ cup cooked rice (cooked in vegetable or chicken stock, preferably)
2 shallots or scallions, minced
6 mushrooms, finely chopped (about 1 cup)
2 tablespoons butter or olive oil
Liver and heart from bird or birds, chopped
1 tablespoon brandy
Freshly ground pepper to taste
¼ teaspoon salt
2 leaves of sage, crushed
¼ teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed

Melt butter in a frying pan. Add shallots, mushrooms, liver and heart and saute until mushrooms begin to give off juice. Add brandy and flame. When flame dies, season with salt, pepper, sage and rosemary, add rice and mix well. Let cool before stuffing birds.

TIAN DE COURGES
(Baked Zucchini, Rice and Cheese)

(6 servings)

6 zucchini, unpeeled or squash peeled
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 onion, minced
⅔ cup cooked rice
½ cup freshly grated Swiss or parmesan cheese
½ cup chopped parsley
1 egg, beaten
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons bread crumbs

Chop the zucchini or pumpkin or squash. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Heat olive oil in a large frying pan and gently cook the onion until tender. Add the zucchini or pumpkin or squash and cook for 10 minutes over low flame, stirring from time to time. Remove from heat and cook a little.

Blend the rice, cheese, parsley, egg, salt and papper and combine with the zucchini and onion. Spread the mixture in an oiled shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with the bread crumbs and 1 tablespoon of the olive oil and bake for 20 minutes.

RICE WITH ARTICHOKES AND OLIVES

(4 servings)

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 package (10 ounces) frozen artichoke hearts, thawed, cut in half
2 cups whole tomatoes, chopped
1 teaspoon marjoram
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 anchovies, chopped
6 black olives, pitted, chopped
1 cup uncooked long-grain rice
½ cup grated romano cheese

In a saucepan, heat oil and brown onion for 2 minutes. Add artichoke hearts and saute for 5 minutes. Stir in tomatoes, marjoram, salt and pepper and simmer for 15 minutes. Add anchovies and olives and simmer for 5 minutes.

Iran port battle leaves 25 dead

KHORAMSHAHR, Iran (AP) — The forces of Ayatollah Khomeini peppered the Arab quarter of Khoramshahr with gunfire through the night after checking an attempt by armed fighters of the Arab minority in southern Iran to take over the country's largest port.

Official sources reported 25 killed in fighting Wednesday and early today, including 22 in Khoramshahr and three in nearby Abadan, the site of the world's largest oil refinery. Arab sources put the death toll at 80.

Khomeini's revolutionary guards and army troops by nightfall had driven most of the Arab fighters into the Arab quarter across the Karoun River from the main part of the city of 100,000 at the head of the Persian Gulf.

Firing First World War bolt-action rifles, U.S. repeater carbines and a machine-gun, the guards on the east bank directed a hail of fire through the night across the 200-metre-wide river and the barges and ships lining both banks.

There was no return fire from the shuttered houses and shops along the west side of the river and no report of more Arab casualties. But the revolutionary guards said one of their men was killed early today during the capture of a police station on the Arab side of the river.

Gunmen swarmed through the streets. Revolutionary guards manned sandbag posts on almost every corner. Ambulances were busy on both sides of the river. The government forces prevented reporters from crossing the river to the Arab quarter, saying they would be in danger.

The Arabs are a Moslem minority among Iran's Moslem Persian majority, but they are in the majority in oil-rich Khuzestan province. They have been pressing for a bigger share of the oil revenues their labor produces, autonomous control of the province, wider use of the Arabic language and an end to alleged job discrimination.

The fighting began about 4 a.m. Wednesday after a tense week during which Arabs occupying several government buildings rejected orders from Admiral Ahmad Madani, the provincial governor-general and the head of the Iranian navy, to give up the buildings and turn in their weapons.

Two more nerve bombs leaking

DENVER (AP) — Two more leaking nerve gas bombs were found Wednesday during tests of the 896 bombs the U.S. Army wants to transfer to Utah next month, officials said.

Two leaking bombs were found last week and the discovery prompted the army to announce that it would reassess its plans to move the bombs, which are currently stored at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal.

Traces of nerve agent GB, the active agent in the bombs, were found in samples taken from two bombs Wednesday, said arsenal spokesman Art Whitney.

He said there was no release of the deadly gas into the air.

Iran scrapping $34B worth of West plants

TEHRAN (WP) — After cancelling nearly all the shah's arms deals with the United States and other foreign countries, Iran is now on the verge of scrapping at least $34 billion worth of major civilian projects — including four nuclear power stations — that are already under way or on the drawing board.

In the latest move to dismantle the deposed monarch's grandiose development plans and turn the country's economic priorities around, the new head of the Atomic Energy Organization of Iran has called for the cancellation of two nuclear power plants that are more than three-quarters complete near Bushehr on the Persian Gulf.

The two 1,200-megawatt units were being built by West Germany's Kraftwerk Union under a 1976 contract. They were to have been the first of some 20 nuclear power stations to be installed in Iran by 1994.

The rest of the program, including two French plants under construction at a site on the Karun River in southwestern Iran, has already been scrubbed.

So have other multibillion-dollar projects ranging from an entire "city centre" in Tehran, a new Tehran airport and a steel mill near Isfahan — all in various stages of planning or site preparation. Other major projects on which construction already had begun are still technically "under study" by the Islamic republic's provisional revolutionary government, but several of them are now considered dead.

These include a $3 billion gas pipeline from the Persian Gulf to the Soviet Union, a $2.4 billion six-lane highway from Tehran to the Gulf port of Bandarshahpour and a $1.3 billion subway system for the capital.

Iran has already spent several billion dollars on these and other projects likely to be written off and stands to see huge investments come to nothing.

It appears that a gas, probably sulfur dioxide, is leaking occasionally from volcanic fractures in Io's surface.

Mr. Laurence Soderblom of the U.S. Geological Survey, said the speculation is that as soon it enters the near-vacuum surrounding Io, the gas condenses and freezes rapidly into tiny "snow" particles. Sunlight scattered by the particles would give them the blue color.

Soderblom said at an American Geophysical Union news conference Wednesday that 30 to 40 of these bluish areas can be seen on photos of Io taken as the Voyager 1 spacecraft passed by the satellite last March after examining the giant planet Jupiter.

Two pictures of the same volcanic crater taken six hours apart strengthened the idea that that the fuzzy bluish areas may be transient clouds of sulfur dioxide snow. One shot showed a bluish glow, but the bluish color was not in the other picture.

Aleuts, Greenpeace at odds over hunt

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Aleut leaders have defended the harvesting of fur seals in the Pribilof Islands, saying the hunting is good for the herd and the natives' economy.

Aleut leaders will brush shoulders with the environmental organization Greenpeace next month during the annual hunt in which the seals are clubbed to death.

Greenpeace said in San Francisco Tuesday the organization plans to arrive in Anchorage June 22 and fly to the islands June 26 to film the hunt. About 10 persons will talk with the natives about replacing the harvest with other work.

Aleut spokesman Agafon Krukoff said Greenpeace should worry about the "whole ecosystem of the Bering Sea, rather than worrying about an unthreatened herd of seals out there in nature's world."

The seal harvest is the basis of the Pribilof economy. By law, only federal employees may operate the commercial seal operation and about 185 Aleuts are employed by the federal government during the harvest, most on a part-time basis.

Border swim by bull beats butcher

HAMBURG (UPI) — A West German bull taken to a French slaughterhouse tore lose from the butcher, headed for the nearby border river and swam back home, violating border laws, police said today.

WARSAW (Reuter) — A Polish farmer who collected signatures for a petition calling for full television coverage of the Pope's visit starting Saturday has been released from a psychiatric hospital, dissident sources said today.

Mirxslaw Jerzy Kimnes was sent for observation to the hospital on May 21 after collecting 300 signatures. He was discharged Wednesday, a spokesman for the dissident Public Self-Defence Committee said.

WASHINGTON (WP) — A senior U.S. Federal Aviation Administration official said Wednesday night that deficiencies in the engine mounting assemblies were found during inspections Wednesday on 15 to 20 McDonnell Douglas DC-10s.

Furthermore, he said, a study of FAA records shows that the DC-10 has a history of engine and pylon support problems going back to 1974. While those problems have been decreasing in number because of a change in maintenance procedures, "the thing that disturbs me," the official said, "is that none of these old problems are related to the new ones we're finding now."

Fresh inspections of all 134 domestic DC-10s were ordered Monday as a result of findings in the investigation of the Chicago air crash last Friday. The death toll from that crash has risen to 274 with the discovery of part of a baby's torso amid the wreckage. Infants in arms wre not listed on the passenger manifesto.

Most of the eight U.S. airlines that fly the DC-10s reported that they were completing their inspections and, where necessary, repairs, and would have most of the troubled planes available for operations today. The inspections must be repeated every 10 days or 100 flying hours, whichever comes first. That is an unusually high rate of re-inspection, aviation authorities said.

The intensive technical reviews were ordered by FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond Tuesday after he unconditionally grounded all U.S.-operated DC-10s. The inspections concentrate on the attachments and supports that hold the engines to the wings of the jumbo jet.

There was also growing evidence Wednesday that the falling engine mortally wounded the hydraulic systems and thus robbed the pilot of the ability to control the plane.

The FAA's computer in Oklahoma City spewed out the DC-10 history sheet Friday night after the crash.

The printout showed that from 1974 through January of this year 62 pylon or engine assembly problems had been reported to the FAA. The history also revealed that 38 such reports had been filed on the four-engine Boeing 747, which has an entirely different engine-mounting system, and that only one similar incident involving the Lockheed L-1011 had been reported.

Bond's order grounding the DC-10 on Tuesday carried with it a notice that new inspection procedures would be developed for the engine assemblies in all wide-bodied aircraft, including the 747 and the L-1011.

1980 BUICK SKYLARK

FRONT-WHEEL DRIVE IN THE MOST SCIENTIFICALLY DESIGNED, TESTED AND PROVEN NEW BUICKS EVER!

When you first drive a 1980 Buick Skylark, you'll know you are driving something totally new! It's every bit a five-passenger Buick, and you'll feel right at home, but you'll know it's different from Buicks of the past. And you'll be right. 1980 Skylark is the newest Buick, with many new components and features engineered for the '80s.

What about fuel economy? It is excellent! A new 4-cylinder Skylark with optional automatic transmission has fuel consumption/economy estimates of 9.1 litres per 100km (comparative rating).* This means much better fuel economy than the comparably-equipped 6-cylinder 1979 model…and better power-to-weight ratio. For example, the new 4-cylinder Skylark, with automatic transmission, will accelerate from 0 to 100 KPH as quickly as its comparably equipped '79 6-cylinder predecessor.

1980 Skylark is lean, handsome, roomy and comfortable–and it's also built to be strong, secure and weight-efficient. It's peppy and responsive and fun. And it's built to resist rust, with special sealers, primers and special metals–plus it's covered by GM's 3-year Perforation from Corrosion Warranty.

There's nothing like a test drive. Let one of the six new Skylark models for 1980 demonstrate what Buick know-how and determination can do when it comes to meeting the challenge of changing times.

Corsicans bomb Paris

PARIS (UPI) — Corsican nationalists set off more than 20 synchronized time bombs in banks, travel agencies and government offices today in one of the most widespread bomb attacks in Paris since the end of the Algerian war 18 years ago. No one was reported hurt.

"The violence we resort to is simply a necessary and legitimate means for ending colonial aggression in Corsica," a spokesman for the group said in a telephone call to a French news agency. "We respond to colonial violence with popular and revolutionary violence."

The spokesman for the Corsican National Liberation Front also said the group wanted to call attention to the upcoming trials of 30 of its members for similar bombings.

Twenty-two bombs exploded, 21 simultaneously and the 22nd about 25 minutes earlier at a eastern suburban branch of the Republican Guards.

Most of the bombs explod ed in office doorways, shattering hundreds of windows and damaging parked cars in the street. In addition to banks and travel agencies, offices of the Transport Ministry, the Civil Aviation Ministry and the government gas and electricity service were bombed.

The Corsican National Liberation Front is one of the best organized separatist movements in France, although officials estimate the group may have fewer than 50 regular members, police said.

The front seeks independence for Corsica, which has been under French rule for 211 years. France annexed the Mediterranean island in 1768, one year before Napolean Bonaparte was born there.

Tourists get break at Irish gas pumps

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Foreign tourists have been promised special treatment in the gasoline-short Irish republic.

Worried that the gas shortage would damage the tourist industry, the government announced that visitors will receive vouchers to buy up to 20 gallons from certain stations.

Beginning this weekend, vouchers will be distributed to car ferry passengers departing from Britain and by the Irish Tourist Board at car rentals in the republic.

Air crash survivor ate her dead dad: report

BOISE (UPI) — The body of a Canadian killed in a plane crash in a remote and rugged area may have been cannibalized by the two survivors, including the victim's daughter, a television station reported Wednesday night.

KTVB-TV said two reliable sources confirmed there was evidence the body of Donald Johnson, 50, may have been cannibalized by the survivors, one of whom was his teen-age daughter.

Custer County Coroner Richard B. Maxwell refused to confirm or deny the report.

Johnson and pilot Norm Pischke died when the plane went down in a mountainous area of central Idaho in early May. Johnson's 17-year-old daughter, Donna, and Brent Dyer, 25, made their way to civilization 19 days later. All four were from Estevan, Saskatchewan.

"I would refuse to dignify the wanderings of a sick mind. I think these people are trying to sensationalize something," said Maxwell in response to questions about the reports.

Carter's million ain't peanuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's latest financial disclosures show he is worth about $1 million, despite heavy losses from the family peanut warehouse business that had been managed by his brother, Billy.

The disclosure statement released today shows that Carter's Warehouse, which is owned 62 per cent by the president, lost more than $50,000 last year.

The disclosure statement, now required of all high-ranking federal government officials, was filed Wednesday with the U.S. Office of Government Ethics.

For example, Carter disclosed that he received last year between $101 and $1,000 in interest from the White House credit union. His account there had a cash value of between $1,001 and $5,000, the report says.

From the report, Carter's net worth appears to be roughly $800,000, excluding the value of his residence in Plains, Ga., and money owed to him by his son, Jack.

In the report, the president lists property and assets totalling about $1.5 million and liabilities totalling about $700,000.

Technically, Carter's interest in the family peanut business is still in a blind trust managed by Kirbo. This means Carter is not supposed to have knowledge of the business operations, on the theory this would remove the possibility he could take actions as president that would benefit him personally.

However, Carter chose to file details of the warehouse's financial operations, including his personal liability for more than $250,000 loaned to the warehouse by the National Bank of Georgia, formerly managed by Carter's friend, former U.S. budget director Bert Lance.

Filing the financial report technically allows Carter to keep Kirbo, an Atlanta lawyer who is among his closest advisers, as his business manager.

A special federal prosecutor, Paul Curran, is investigating allegations that proceeds of bank loans to the business might have found their way illegally into Carter's 1976 presidential election campaign.

No evidence that would support such allegations has been reported so far.

Soviet team skis way to North Pole

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A seven-man Soviet team reached the North Pole today after a 10-week journey on skis across the Arctic Circle, Tass news agency reported.

The amateur explorers, led by Dmitri Shparo, a Moscow university professor, set off from Henrietta Island in rubber dinghies March 16 on an expedition organized by the Soviet newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

Israel calls halt to Lebanon barrage

United Press International

Israel halted its week-long artillery and naval barrage on south Lebanon today, hours before an emergency U.N. meeting to review the latest assaults, but several Israeli jets tore through Lebanese airspace along the coast.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman warned the Arab states today not to expect Israel to return other occupied territory the way it gave the Sinai back to Egypt. "There is no analogy between the Sinai and other locations," Weizman told the Ma'ariv newspaper.

"Judea, Samaria (the West Bank) and the Gaza Strip are part of the Land of Israel from a spiritual, historical and, without a doubt, security point of view," Weizman said.

"The Israeli attacks stopped at 4 a.m. Thursday," a broadcast of the state-owned station said.

But Palestinian officials said there was intermittent shelling in the central and eastern sectors of the Lebanese-Israeli frontier.

Beirut radio said several Israeli warplanes broke the sound barrier over the southern coastal town of Sidon and made low-flying passes over the Palestinian refugee camp of Ain el Hilweh on the outskirts of Tyre.

Dying Indian girl 'heroic'

ALERT BAY (CP) — An 11-year-old native Indian girl who died of a ruptured appendix and peritonitis five days after entering hosptial masked her condition well, a Vancouver General Hospital specialist told a coroner's jury Wednesday.

Dr. Lesley Patterson, an internal specialist, said Renee Smith acted like a hero in the way she hid the pain.

"She was quietly enduring pain that would have those of us who were usual screaming their heads off," he said.

Patterson said he attributed death to large amounts of toxin taking over her body. Renee had been receiving speridol, dramamine, demerol and aspirin after being admitted to St. George's Hospital Jan. 18.

Patterson said Dr. Jack Pickup, the lone doctor for the 1,800 residents of this isolated community on Cormorant Island off northeastern Vancouver Island, did the right thing in deciding to treat the girl medically rather than surgically because of her acute chest condition.

"Secondary conditions must be handled before surgery or you can get hypothermia deaths," he said. "You don't give an anaesthetic until everything under heaven has been done to prepare the way."

Patterson said he felt Pickup provided better-than-average medical care despite records that weren't up to date.

He said Vancouver General Hospital is 100,000 charts behind and the records at St. George's are better than some kept at other community hospitals of the same size.

Pickup was later criticized by Vancouver coroner Glen McDonald for not requesting an autopsy immediately following the girl's death Jan. 22.

Pickup had testified earlier that he was unable to sign a death certificate because he was not sure what to list as the cause of death.

Asked by McDonald why, if he was unable to sign the certificate, he had not reported the matter to local coroner William Deadman, Pickup said he had fully expected to speak to Deadman Jan. 23 but had been kept busy at the hospital.

"You had just lost a patient, was there anything more important than that?" McDonald asked. "You should have discussed it with Deadman immediately and let the coroner order an autopsy."

An autopsy was eventually ordered Jan. 24 after undertaker Leo O'Connell confronted the doctor, police and hospital authorities with an allegation that the girl had been sexually assaulted.

Pickup told the inquest that he was opposed to an autopsy because the girl's family did not want one.

"Autopsies are not popular with families in general and it's my impression the native people are very opposed to them."

Pickup said he could not explain a delay in obtaining a urine analysis from the hospital laboratory. The sample was taken the day Renee was admitted but the results were not provided until the day of her death.

"But it wouldn't have told me anything anyway, even if it had been made available sooner," he said.

Pickup said he had not had a holiday in 18 months and had been working a seven-day week during that time.

Inside CUPE settles

City hall inside workers Wednesday reached tentative agreement with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association on a two-year contract providing for a compounded wage increase of 15.2 per cent.

The members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 388, will be voting on the agreement sometime in the next two weeks, local president Rick Doyle said today.

The contract is basically the same as that already accepted by Greater Victoria Library Board and Capital Region Board employees. It is retroactive to Jan. 1 and provides a 7.25-per-cent increase in each year.

However, one difference in the city hall contract is that the GVLRA has agreed to drop a demand for changes to a leave of absence clause pending whatever agreement on the clause is reached with eight other CUPE locals bargaining jointly.

The GVLRA wants the clause changed so that union officials will only get time off with pay when involved in negotiations.

If the union officials are engaged in other third-party matters, such as mediation or Labor Relations Board hearings, the union would have to pay them for their lost time off work.

The next meeting with the Joint Negotiating Committee, bargaining for the eight locals, is set for June 14.

Long Beach Record Eyed

A record number of visitors are expected this summer to Long Beach in Pacific Rim National Park and to walk the West Coast trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield.

"More than 650,000 people visited the park in 1978," park superintendent Frank Camp said today.

"Judging by the number of people who have used the park and trail since January, we anticipate a big increase in park attendance."

The campground at Long Beach has been three-quarter full since March.

Two construction crews are presently improving the last nine miles of the 45-mile trail between Camper Bay and Port Renfrew, he said.

B.C. dockers set strike date

Longshoremen in B.C. have set a strike deadline of 1 a.m. June 7 after rejecting a concilator's report that they vote again on a proposed contract turned down twice before — the last time by one vote.

Bob Peebles, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, said Wednesday that membership meetings have been called to prepare for the strike, which would involve about 3,000 men at seven West Coast ports.

Union members twice rejected a proposed contract would increase the base rate of $9.10 an hour by 90 cents in each year of the three-year pact, establish automatic cost-of-living increases, strengthen job security, improve pensions and other benefits.

The strike, against all member companies of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, would effectively shut down the ports of Victoria, Vancouver, New Westminster, Chemainus, Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Prince Rupert.

She was the wife of Fitzpatrick (Pat) Dunn, of 2750 Thorpe Place, a retired chartered accountant who is vice-president of Ducks Unlimited for Canada and a director of the organization in the United States.

Born in Victoria, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacDonald.

An ardent golfer, who took part in many competitions in Victoria, she was also a first class basketball player and was a member of a champion team trained by Bob Whyte, one of B.C.'s outstanding basketball players.

Police hunting TD Bank thief

City police are continuing the hunt for a man who held up the Toronto-Dominion Bank in Fairfield Plaza Wednesday morning and made off with $1,710.

The suspect, in his mid or late 20s, with black, curly hair and a moustache, shoved a brown paper bag at the teller and told her to fill it up or he'd "blast you away." He had his hand in his pocket simulating a gun.

Several customers were in the bank at the time but were unaware of the robbery until the man fled out the door and the teller sounded the alarm.

THIS SPORTS CAR IS FOR THE FAMILY.

Mazda 626.

If you're the kind of person who thrives on excitement, then the most exciting sports car today would certainly appeal to you. And that car would be the Mazda RX-7.

"Simply stated, the RX-7 is 70 cubic inches of pure dynamite" is how Cars Magazine described it (June, 1978).

Car and Driver (May, 1978) said "...you'd gladly trade your favourite fantasy for an RX-7 after one quick test-drive."

But mere words are hardly enough to describe this car. You must experience it to know what it is all about. So, test drive one.

Now, if you're the kind of-person who loves sports cars and wishes someone, somewhere could build an affordable 4-seat family sports car, the Mazda 626 will excite you.

It will excite you because this car rides like an expensive European car. Yet, it corners and handles like a sports car. That's because the 626's suspension system is patterned after the Mazda RX-7.

Under the hood is a 2000 cc overhead cam piston engine that not only delivers an excellent thrust of power, but also delivers excellent fuel economy. Transport Canada's comparative fuel consumption rating for the 626 5-speed is 8.4 litres/100 km (54 km/gal).*

Orthopedically contoured front bucket seats with a lumbar support and height adjustment in the driver's seat. Versatile split rear seats where either or both seats fold down for more trunk space. Plush cloth interior. AM/FM stereo. Electric clock. Electric trunk release. Rear window defroster. Styled steel wheels with steel belted radials. Tinted glass. Map pockets. And more. All these features make it hard to believe the affordable price the 626 sells for.

Your nearest Mazda dealer.

Opening lead — jack of clubs.

It is always relaxing to play against defenders who never falsecard, and many contracts can be salvaged if their signals to each other can be taken at face value.

Consider this deal where West leads a club against six hearts. At first blush, there seems to be absolutely nothing to the play. You plan to draw trumps and lead a spade toward dummy's king.

If West has the ace you make the slam, even if he goes up, since you can then park your diamond loser on the king of spades. But if East has the ace, you go down because you lose a spade trick and a diamond trick.

However, there's more to the play than meets the eye. You may be able to make the slam even if East has the ace of spades. Let's say that after winning the club lead you cash the K-A of hearts and East discards the nine of spades on your second trump lead.

What you do next depends on how well you know East. If he is a player who always tells the truth, you can feel certain that his nine signal shows the ace. In that case it would be foolish to play a spade to dummy's king. You would surely go down if you did that.

Instead, you should first cash dummy's A-K of diamonds, return to your hand with a trump, then cash the A-K of clubs, discarding the 6-5 of spades from dummy. Now you lead a spade to the singleton king.

East wins with the ace but is compelled to yield a ruff and discard, whether he returns a spade or a club. So you wind up making the slam because you showed faith in the integrity of your fellow man.

GARDENING

Foundations can be tricky

Questions on foundation plantings have increased in the past two weeks.

Plants in these beds around the residence are wilting, foliage is turning brown and falling, flowers and buds are dropping instead of making a grand display.

Some home gardeners have applied several types of sprays in the belief that diseases or pests are the cause, but the condition of the plants has only worsened.

Others have scratched dry fertilizer into the surface soil around the plants hoping to see some improvement.

The one thing none of the questioners has done is to give the plantings a thorough soaking with water. When lack of water at the roots is suggested the gardeners express the belief that so much rain has fallen this spring it is impossible for the soil to be in need of water.

Records show that rainfall over the past two months has been about one-half of last year's totals, and last year was far below normal for this area.

While skies have been cloudy on many days, minimal amounts of rain have fallen on gardens in Victoria and the southern end of the Saanich Peninsula.

Foundation plantings have always been a problem. The back-fill around the foundation, which was excavated before the cribbing was set, is just poor subsoil, mainly clay and later topped with an inch or so of soil. There is no humus to hold water in the area of plant roots.

The concrete foundation itself soaks up water needed by the plants, and the eaves of the roof allow only a small percentage of heavy rain to penetrate the mass of foliage and reach the soil in which the plants are growing. Light showers have no chance of wetting the soil.

Most foundation plantings need regular watering over winter, especially when under the wide California-type eaves which became popular some thirty years ago.

Gardeners have been surprised when test holes dug among the plants showed the soil almost bone dry while sections of the open garden had water on the surface.

Warnings were issued early this year that wells would be dry before summer, and that another winter of low rainfall and snowfall could result in water shortages in this area.

The conditions of the plants in foundation plantings are due to the necessary amount of moisture not being maintained by gardeners over winter, many plantings receiving no artificial watering after the rains started last September. This is one area of the garden that is completely forgotten after the fall rains start.

A few small holes dug twelve to fourteen inches deep along the foundation and in vacant spots between plants will reveal the true moisture conditions of the beds.

To restore the needed amount of moisture to the soil in these beds will require a trickling open-end hose, a miniature sprinkler that will fit under the foliage, or a canvas soaker with just enough pressure to maintain a steady drip, around the base of each plant for several hours, followed by aother good watering in seven to 10 days' time. A surface mulch of compost or mushroom compost will help to prevent rapid water loss from the surface.

Sprays must be avoided; they can kill a dehydrated plant. Fertilizer is useless until the soil is moist to root level so that the dissolved fertilizer salts can be washed down to the roots.

Forests Minister Tom Waterland does the spadework

Less than 15 minutes from downtown Victoria a small forest is taking root, a forest that will be genetically managed to produce the super trees of the future.

It's Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd.'s Lost Lake Seed Orchard, a 28-hectare operation set up to produce high quality nursery stock for re-planting projects on Vancouver Island and in the Queen Charlottes.

The orchard, on Beckwith next to Blenkinsop Lake, was officially opened Wednesday by Forests Minister Tom Waterland.

The $1.2 million operation should start producing its first seeds in about six years.

Stock for the orchard is taken from superior Western Hemlock and Sitka Spruce specimens that were selected after an intensive search around the province by Rayonier foresters.

The orchard is expected to produce genetic seeds of increasing quality and value as a result of cross-breeding techniques.

Rayonier officials said the orchard will lead to higher quality forests.

Rent rollback ruled legal

VANCOUVER (CP) — County court Judge Ray Paris ruled Wednesday that the rentalsman's office can declare some rent increases excessive.

The provincial government's Landlord and Tenant Act was being challenged as being at odds with the British North America Act.

However, Paris said the provincial rentalsman's office was legally entitled to roll back rent hikes at a 51-suite apartment building in Richmond because it was ruling on the basis of a contract and not assuming a judicial role.

Before the judge

A 30-year-old city man who was on parole when he stole from a 90-year-old invalid was given 18 more months in jail by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Wednesday.

Mark Graham Murray, 520 Cook, pleaded guilty to theft over $200 on May 14 in Saanich.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court Murray went to 2941 Seaview about a gardening job and was admitted to the house by the invalid.

Mulligan said Murray left but returned immediately and removed a $300 mahogany table, a crucifix, candle holder and an oil painting. He attempted to pawn them, succeeding only in getting $20 for the candle holder. He was arrested the next day by Saanich police.

Murray was convicted June 17, 1976, of armed robbery and being an accessory after the fact and was consecutive sentences of 2½ years and six months.

He had a criminal record dating back to 1969 which included convictions for theft, possession of stolen property, breaking and entering, and possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking and was given four previous jail terms.

In dismissing defence lawyer Don Linge's application for a suspended sentence, probation and community service work, Ostler said Murray preyed on an old invalid in a heartless manner and the offence was contemptible.

* * *

After getting agreement from Mulligan that two teenagers from Alberta had spent enough time in custody awaiting sentence, Ostler handed out suspended sentences, one-year probations and 100 hours of community service to each.

Brian Dale Hachey, 17, and Perry George Saunders, 18, pleaded guilty Tuesday to theft of a 1978 Pontiac from Plimley Motors, 1010 Yates, on the pretence of being interested in purchase.

Hachey told the court he was trained as a disc jockey and shouldn't have difficulty finding a job in Victoria while Saunders said he was thinking of returning to Eastern Canada where he could obtain employment.

* * *

Two men were remanded further until Friday for psychiatric examinations.

A man arrested as John Doe, who told Ostler on Monday his name was Michael Peter Romanoff, was remanded in custody after Crown counsel Gordon Macdonald said a report indicated Romanoff was incapable of entering his guilty plea on a charge of possession of marijuana.

* * *

Arthur Dwayne Price, 19, of Chemainus, who is serving a nine-month term imposed May 6, 1979, in Duncan for breaking and entering, was given a one-month, concurrent sentence after pleading guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on March 17 in Sidney.

And 64-year-old William Buchanan, 1251 Balmoral, was given 30 days for his fourth conviction for drinking-driving and a further 15 days for his second conviction for driving while under suspension. In addition, Ostler ordered him to accept Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society counselling as directed during his six-month probation period and to perform 75 hours of community service work.

* * *

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Patrick Leroy Preus, 47, of 635 Hoffman, $600; Robert Bruce Black, 32, of 479 Monterey, $400; Alexander Harley Thomson, 46, of 3807 Sooke Lake Road, $400; Raymond Hingley, 69, of 2023 Chartre, $400; Freddy Hoole, 31, of 893 Klahanie Drive, $75; and Doris Williams, 29, of 961 Paquachin Place, $50.

In addition, Hoole was ordered to perform 80 hours of community service work and Williams 125 hours.

A 40-year-old Victoria man was sentenced in county court Wednesday to 18 months in jail after a jury convicted him of indecently assaulting a 19-year-old woman.

The jury deliberated two hours before giving its guilty verdict against Theodore Edward Stephens. The offence occurred in the woman's apartment Dec. 27.

Judge M.L.T. Drake agreed with Crown counsel Donald Laughton that the major factors to be considered in sentencing Stephens were the protection of the woman and the public.

He told the jurors in his address before deliberations began that they were faced with conflicting stories. The woman gave explicit details of a sexual attack while Stephens denied absolutely that it happened.

Stephens has an extensive criminal record, mostly for thefts and break-ins, but also including common assault and prowling by night.

Also in county court, Drake fined Zeljko Stubljar, 18, $500 after he pleaded guilty to common assault against Clinton Edward Dobie Nov. 27 in Saanich. Drake said Stubljar overreacted to irritating provocation because Dobie had damaged his apartment.

Two men, Richard Lloyd Barlow, 21, and Kevin Edward Gilbertson, 19, were fined $250 each by Judge E.J.C. Stewart in county court for assault causing bodily harm to Darrin Danyleyko in Colwood April 18, 1978. They pleaded guilty. The victim needed 10 stitches to his upper lip and had a broken nose.

Philip George Keeler, 20, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for one year by Stewart for trafficking in a substance held out to be cannabis resin Feb. 23, 1978. He sold two ounces of what turned out later to be molasses to undercover policemen for $800.

Stewart noted that Keeler was an otherwise good citizen with no criminal record who had made a good impression on his probation officer. He had also spent seven days in jail before making bail and had behaved himself since the offence.

Prittie honored by SFU

Victoria resident Robert Prittie was among five British Columbians to receive honorary degrees from Simon Fraser University over the weekend.

Others were Mr. Justice Thomas R. Berger of the B.C. Supreme Court, sportsman-businessman Cyrus McLean, musician Harry Adaskin and Syd Thompson of the International Woodworkers of America.

A teacher by training, Prittie has a long history of political service to B.C., serving as MP for Burnaby-Richmond from 1962-68 and mayor of Burnaby from 1969-73. He also is a former deputy municipal affairs minister.

Student art to tour

They are Donovan Evans of Fairburn Elemetary, Robyn Else of Landsdowne Junior and Douglas Jung and Nickhil Patel of Brentwood College.

Else, along with David Pearcy of Glenlyon Primary and Amy Darwin of Alexander Elementary in Duncan, also received honorable mention.

The exhibition will tour the province this summer. It is supported by the Vanciouver-based Emily Carr College of Art and the Canadian Commission for International Year of the Child.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The American economy is taking its sharpest plunge in years, with some economists predicting a year-long recession and unemployment of 8 per cent.

Adding further gloom to the picture, Saudi Arabian officials indicated they will not stand in the way of a large increase in the official price of crude oil when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets in Geneva next month.

The reports came as Saudi Arabia increased prices by $1.40 U.S. to $17.87 a barrel on its Berri grade of crude oil, a high grade of petroleum that comprises about four per cent of the 8.5 million barrels OPEC's largest member produces daily.

Meanwhile, it was reported that last month the U.S. Index of Leading Economic Indicators had taken its sharpest plunge ever recorded, that new orders to the nation's factories for manufactured goods had dropped by $9.1 billion and that the trade deficit was nearly $2.2 billion, the worst in three months.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that April's slide of 3.3 per cent in the economic indicator index — a major gauge of the economy — was even bigger than the 3 per cent dip recorded in September, 1974, during the last big recession.

The decline in factory orders of 6.1 per cent to $141 billion was the sharpest percentage decline in any one month since 6.6 per cent in December, 1974.

A large part of the decline in factory orders consisted of drops in requests for durable good such as non-electrical machinery, transportation equipment, primary metals and fabricated metal products.

Some economists believe that if the leading indicator index falls three straight months in a row a recession lies ahead. Others say that this is too simple a rule, especially since the index gyreates wildly and is frequently revised.

Last month, the department reported the index had fallen three months in a row — January, February and March.

But today, the department

UIC curbs delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Restrictions on unemployment insurance benefits scheduled to go into effect Sunday have been postponed pending a review by the Progressive Conservative government.

A spokesman at unemployment insurance headquarters said today that senior officials decided Monday to delay the changes, to give a new minister the opportunity to review them.

Joe Clark is to name his new cabinet Monday, including a person to replace the defeated Liberal Bud Cullen, minister of employment, who piloted the insurance changes through Parliament last winter.

The changes, creating new categories of insurance claimants and increasing the weeks persons have to work before they qualify for benefits, were opposed by Conservatives in Parliament.

Conservatives proposed scrapping the new plan and instituting instead a two-tiered benefit system with lower payments to claimants without dependents.

The Liberals said changes would cut about 214,000 persons from insurance rolls in the first year and save about $440 million.

Officials estimated that the Conservative proposal would reduce benefits to about 1.8 million persons, about 73 per cent of claimants, for a saving of about $850 million.

The new categories of claimants that would have gone into effect Sunday are repeaters, claiming benefits for the second time in a year; new entrants, claiming benefits after a first job; re-entrants, claiming benefits after a job preceded by a long absence from the labor force.

Most people in these groups would have to work longer than the standard 10 to 14 weeks to qualify for benefits.

Conservatives said the plan is excessively complicated, would be unfair to persons in regions with high seasonal unemployment and would penalize women who leave the labor force to raise children.

Liberals rejected the Conservative's two-tiered system on grounds it would discriminate against women put an extra burden on employers to determine which employees have dependents and create complex administrative problems.

The New Democratic Party also opposed the two-tiered plan. But it was officially endorsed by three provincial Conservative governments — Ontario, Newfoundland and New Brunswick.

Food profits up 43%

OTTAWA (CP) — Latest profit figures show that the retail food industry increased its first-quarter profits by 43 per cent compared with the corresponding quarter of 1978. During the same three-month period, the sales increased by a much smaller 19 per cent.

"Profit margins do appear to be up substantially," said Larry Thibault, chief economist for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

"But profits in that business go up and down like a yo-yo," he added. "The food industry has been literally studied to death in the last few years and from all the shelves of studies I've got in my office I haven't seen one that's been able to prove any kind of rip-off profits."

Spokesmen for the food chains say their profit margin on groceries is small.They maintain that the only way they manage to stay in business with their small mark-up on individual items is to sell in huge volume.

"The pressures on Loblaws and Dominion and the others are real and intense," said Thibault. Consumer pressure has been a key factor in innovations such as no-name products and no-frills discount grocery outlets in large cities, he said.

"But I think we've reached the stage where the retail food business is about as efficient and competitive as it can get," he said. "I can think of no dramatic improvement that can be squeezed out of the system."

Blank cheque Loto?

She wrote Loto Canada after the December draw, for which she held a ticket devoid of a number, and was visited by auditor Allan Glennis of Loto Canada's Ottawa office.

She said she declined to give the ticket to Glennis although "he was practically begging me to give it to him."

She withheld on the ticket on the advice of her lawyer and said she believes any unclaimed prize money should be split among the group of 10 people, including herself, who bought the ticket.

Barbara Patterson, public relations officer for the Atlantic office of Loto Canada, said officials wanted the ticket to show the printer the error that had occurred.

She said a sheet on which 18 tickets were printed was placed in a machine backwards, causing the number to be printed on the wrong side.

Loto officials traced down the other ticket holders.

Mrs. Jeffries said she was given another ticket on the draw by Glennis.

Collision with tree kills biker

A 21-year-old motorcyclist was killed today in an early morning mishap in Oak Bay, the second traffic fatality in southern Vancouver Island in 24 hours.

Gordon Bernard Kopplin, 1186 May, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 5:50 a.m.

Oak Bay police said Kopplin was riding his motorcycle in the 1000-block Newport when he ran into a tree after failing to round a curve.

An inquest is expected but no date has been set.

An inquest is also expected in connection with a fatality on Shawnigan Lake Road about 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said William Robert Lyness, 60, of 691 Camellia Place in Saanich, drowned after his car travelling at high speed plunged into the south end of the lake and came to rest in about five metres of water.

There were no skid marks on the road which has given rise to suspicions Lyness, a maintenance man with the defence department, may have suffered a heart attack.

FLQ pair's plea sparks hot courtroom debate

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, the onetime Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists, became the focus of a dramatic legal debate today on the just punishment for the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross in October, 1970.

Arguments on sentence began minutes after the couple pleaded guilty to charges of kidnapping, conspiracy and forcible detention in the 60-day kidnapping that sparked the October Crisis.

But they refused to enter a guilty plea to a fourth charge of extortion against the Quebec government during the crisis. They were nevertheless convicted when Chief Judge Yves Mayrand of sessions court entered a guilty verdict.

Crown prosecutor Jean-Pierre Bonin argued for a tough sentence that would help fight the "international wound" caused by a wave of terrorism in the 1970s.

But he made no specific suggestion on the length of sentence.

In an emotional opening statement, defence lawyer Serge Menard argued for clemency on grounds that the couple had openly renounced terrorism, that they has suffered greatly during eight years of exile and that the Quebec justice system's public image would suffer if a harsh punishment were imposed.

Judge Mayrand based his guilty verdict on the extortion charge — somewhat of a legal oddity in the absence of a full trial — on a series of factual admissions that the couple made through their lawyer.

Menard said his clients were ready to concede they conspired to kidnap Cross, forcibly detained him and were also involved in the Oct. 5, 1970, kidnapping.

But he argued the extortion charge was based on acts they committed during the kidnapping and on a ransom demand that was issued as a negotiating tactic and later dropped.

Ferries' version 'incorrect'

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

A Victoria woman said today the B.C. Ferries version of an incident involving a leaky propane truck was incorrect and that the vehicle — which could have been exploded by a spark — was carried to Vancouver Island from the mainland.

Ferry spokesman Bill Bouchard said earlier the truck was ordered off the Queen of Esquimalt at Swartz Bay as soon as ferry workers spotted the leak.

According to Bouchard the truck had been ordered off before the vessel sailed.

In fact, the woman said, the truck was carried over from Tswassen to Swartz Bay, leaking the entire time, with passengers evacuated to a top deck.

The woman, who asked not to be identified, said the truck was leaking badly.

"The air on the car deck was saturated with gas. Any spark, if anybody had so much as lit a cigarette down there, the whole ferry would have exploded," she told the Times.

The woman said she was parked near the Sidney Freight Ltd. truck that was apparently carrying a leaky propane tank with its cargo.

The woman said things didn't happen the way ferry officials described it in the earlier news accounts.

"That truck was leaking when it came aboard. I was parked a few cars away and you could hear it hissing. About 15 or 20 minutes out they apparently discovered it and everyone was ordered off the car deck . . . they should have turned back, but we went on."

She praised the way the crew handled the situation, however, saying they were "very cool".

But, she added, "that truck should never have been allowed aboard . . . there should be some way of checking vehicles before they're loaded."

B.C. Ferry officials were unavailable for comment today but it is understood the incident is still under investigation.

A spokesman for Sidney Freight said his company is concerned about the matter and is looking into it.

Under B.C. Ferry regulations, vehicles carrying highly flammable or explosive materials are not allowed aboard passenger ferries but are consigned to special dangerous cargo runs.

Mortgage rate jumps blamed on PC policy

TORONTO (CP) — House owners expecting a tax break from the new federal government received bad news Wednesday from some major mortgage lenders.

Two banks and a trust company raised key mortgage rates a quarter point.

Economists had predicted the Progressive Conservative election promise on mortgage interest deduction would raise mortgage rates. The Conservatives have promised a four-year program under which home owners might deduct up to $5,000 a year on their mortgage interest and $1,000 on property tax.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Bank of Montreal and Canada Trustco Mortgage Co. of London, Ont., were the first to announce increases.

Effective immediately, the banks' rates on closed, five-year and three-year National Housing Act-approved mortgages increased to 11 per cent from 10¾ per cent.

The rate on five-year conventional and NHA open mortgages, at 11½ and 11¼ respectively, were not changed.

The trust company raised its rates for one- through five-year mortgages to 11 per cent for NHA mortgages and 11¼ for conventional mortgages.

Kinross Mortgage Corp., a subsidiary of Canadian Imperial, increased its five-year debenture rate by one-quarter to 10 per cent.

Canadian Imperial said the increase "reflects the continuing high cost of funds to the bank."

The mortgage rates had to rise because "money costs have risen to the level that lending rates could not be sustained" at current levels.

New hurler wins debut

A recent arrival from Toronto, Howell checked in with a six-hit effort Wednesday and a 10-5 victory over Capital Radiators in his debut as a pitcher with Farmer Construction at Lambrick Park.

Howell also helped his own cause with a two-run double.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was down fractionally in active mid-afternoon trading.

Trading in shares of Brascan Ltd. A resumed at 10:47 a.m. after a delay at the opening for dissemination of news that Edper Equities Ltd. has offered $28 a share for five million shares of Brascan A to bring its holdings to more than 50 per cent. The stock rose ⅜ to $24 by 2 p.m.

Trading in shares of Bonanza Oil and Gas Ltd. was halted at 1:53 p.m. pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $7⅝.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said common shares of Mountain States Resources Ltd. will be posted for trading without par value in the oil and gas category at the opening June 8. Five million shares will be listed, of which 4.042 million are outstanding and 633,000 are subject to issuance.

Among industrials, Cominco fell 1⅞ to $37, Union Gas A ¾ to $10, Seagram Co. ¾ to $36¾, Noranda Mines A ¾ to $40½ and Canadian Pacific ¼ to $31⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was slightly lower today, struggling to stabilize after Wednesday's sharp drop.

Before the opening the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators fell 3.3 per cent in April.

That marked the largest decline in more than 4½ years for the index, which is designed to detect evidence of the future course of the economy.

One group which moved against the trend was the gold-mining stocks, aided by a sharp rise in world bullion prices.

Dome Mines gained 3⅜ to $112⅜; Campbell Red Lake ¾ to $39; Homestake ¼ to $33⅝, and ASA ¼ to $28⅛.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — Equities on the London stock market were generally above the day's lows in quiet trading. Gold shares rose sharply following the record bullion price, dealers said. The Financial Times index was unavailable. Oil issues were weaker. Major industrials were mainly lower. Canadian issues were mixed with an easier bias.

—VANCOUVER—

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange with volume at 10:51 a.m. at 2,014,228 shares.

In the industrials, Ardiem Industrial Corp. was unchanged at .25 on 5,000 shares.
